Promise Startling Revelations

'BACHELOR GIRLS' WIN AND LOSE

Jamaica Plain Seceders Change Name; Injunction Is Denied.

NOW THE 'DOROTHY GIRLS.'

The Bachelor Girls of Jamaica Plain lost their fight against the other Bachelor Girls of Jamaica Plain today in the Superior Court when Judge Hardy denied their petition for an injunction restraining the latter club from holding a dance and shirtwaist party tonight. The girls holding the party declared they called themselves "The Dorothy Girls."

When Assistant Clerk Salton called the case attorneys for both sides stepped to the bench. Judge Hardy smiled and told the attorneys to proceed with their case. The original "Bachelor Girls" representative began by giving a resume of the case, and Judge Hardy said: "The public may suffer, but I don't see how they (meaning the plaintiffs) would suffer by the 'Bachelor Girls' holding the dance under that name."

After the attorney for the defendants had announced that the girls had changed their club name and had issued tickets under the new name, he proceeded to show the justice that what he said was the truth by producing one of the new tickets. When he wanted to corroborate his own story he handed Justice Hardy one of the tickets and the Judge said, "I don't care to go," smilingly.

Many male friends of both sides were in attendance and sat within hearing distance of the arguments so as to have a thorough knowledge of the proceedings, which would enable them to tell a straight tale when they reached the corridors.

Shines Now 10 Cents at 75 Boston Shops

Shoe "shines" were advanced from five to ten cents at three-fourths of the "shine" parlors in the city proper today because of the victory won by the Bootblacks' Union in their strike for a weekly minimum wage of $6, with a twelve-hour-day maximum, and the right to keep all tips. Fully seventy-five shops are affected by this advance in prices.

A MERRY POSE by Miss Pauline Herrick, pretty Boston salesgirl, who today pleaded guilty to larceny from another store where she had goods charged. She declares a Harvard student is her fiance.

PLEA OF GUILTY MADE BY PAULINE HERRICK

Pauline Herrick of No. 72 Rutland street, a former cloak model, arrested Saturday night on the charge of larceny of $181.00 worth of clothing from a department store, pleaded guilty today before Chief Justice Bolster in the Municipal Court.

The store's attorney said the goods had been returned and suggested letting the girl go, but Justice Bolster postponed his decision until Wednesday to give the probation officers a chance to look into the girl's story.

Miss Herrick is a beautiful girl of nineteen, with dark hair and eyes. She told Judge Bolster this story at the bench today.

Former Model's Story.

"I have been living with my aunt for the last two weeks. I'm engaged to marry Jimmy Davis as soon as he gets through Harvard.

"These clothes that I am charged with stealing, I bought and charged to William Wilcock, who is in business at No. 214 Summer street. He knew about it, and everything was all right, but when he refused to pay for them, the store, of course, had to have me arrested.

"I've known Wilcock for two or three years. He often took me to the store and bought me clothes, or gave me presents. I didn't like to refuse them.

"About a week ago, he suggested that I go on a trip to New York. I refused, and at that time I had on one of these waists I am charged with stealing.

"He said if I didn't go, he wouldn't pay for the clothes. I refused still, and so he had the store arrest me.

To Tell Wilcock's Father.

"I'm planning to go to Maine as soon as this case is over with, but first I'm going down to Summer street and tell Mr. Wilcock's father what his son is doing.

"I've been living in Boston for five years, and used to be a cloak model and salesgirl in a department store. I've known Wilcock and Davis for two or three years. They used to be good friends."

The girl's purchases of clothing—which she is charged with stealing—extended from May 26 to June 4. They included a $55 suit.

William Wilcock was responsible for her arrest, the police say. The store says she gave the name of Pauline Wilcock in making her purchases.

Miss Herrick spent Saturday night in the Tombs. Davis, her fiance, in the meantime had settled for the goods she was charged with stealing, and then raised $200 and bailed her out Sunday.

Davis gave the name of John Marsh when he first attempted to bail the girl.

Government Can Sue Adams Express Co.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The right of the government to sue the Adams Express Company under the commerce law was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States today.

MAYOR AND FISH SCORED

Finance Commission Raps Their "Unbusinesslike" Methods on Annex.

URGES MORE CAUTION

Mayor Fitzgerald and Superintendent of Public Buildings Fish are severely criticised by the Finance Commission today for what that body terms "unbusinesslike and irregular methods in connection with the construction of the new eleven-story City Hall annex.

The Commission cautions the City Council to exercise extreme care in granting additional appropriations for the building because of these so-called unbusiness like methods.

The Commission takes the Mayor severely to task for not having awarding the plans for the building to Edward T. P. Graham without competition. In this connection the Commission and its own architect, R. Clipton Sturgis, who examined the plans of Graham, are in disagreement, for Sturgis is on record as commending the policy of not opening the plans to competition. The American Society of Architects and the Boston society have also endorsed the Mayor's action.

The City Council is advised to reject the appropriation of $34,000 for a lime stone cornice on the building because it believes that the building at present is unnecessarily ornate.

The commission urges that the Mayor and the architect should confer immediately with the department heads on the allotment of space.

Milk Bill Vetoed by the Governor

Governor Foss today vetoed the Meaney milk bill, so-called, providing that milk imported into Massachusetts from other States and pasteurized milk shall be so labelled on the containers.

The Governor gives as his principal reason that the bill discriminates against milk producers in other New England States.

Demands Middlesex County Inquiry

The House of Representatives by a vote of 67 to 31 today suspended the rules to allow the introduction of a resolve providing for an investigation of the affairs of Middlesex County. The resolve was referred to the Committee on Rules. Representative Henry J. Mahoney introduced the resolve and said: "The recent disclosures of irregularities in the accounts of Fred R. Smith, a jail official, show the necessity for an investigation." Representative Brennan of Cambridge and Dean of Wakefield favored the resolve.

Home Rule Bill in House Stirs Cheers

LONDON, June 9.—There was a noisy demonstration in the House of Commons this afternoon when Premier Asquith moved the second reading of the Home Rule bill. The Liberals and Irish Nationalists joined in cheering the government.

The second reading is preliminary to the second passage of the bill. When it is passed the third time it will become a law of the land, irrespective of any action that the Lords may take on it.

FROSTS IN OHIO; MERCURY AT 30

CLEVELAND, O., June 9.—According to the weather bureau, today was the coldest June day in the history of the State. In some portions the thermometer fell to 30 degrees this morning and frosts were reported in several sections.

BOSTON MAN ON BURNING LINER AT SEA

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The Cuban steamship Olinda, with her cargo afire, is 300 miles off the Carolina coast sending out wireless calls for help. The United States gunboat Nashville is in wireless communication with her and is believed to be steaming to her aid.

The Nashville picked the distress call up at 8 a. m. and relayed the message to Charleston, S. C., whence it was transmitted to the Navy Yard here.

The revenue cutter Seminole at Wilmington, N. C., has been ordered to the relief of the Olinda. The Olinda cannot reach Charleston in less than twenty-four hours. The fire is in the Olinda's front hold.

The Olinda's passenger list was as follows:

Guy Cheney of Boston, R. Hayward and A. Kelley of Brooklyn, and S. A. Salazar, I. Betancourt and G. Manzano, registered from Havana, Cuba.

Second Conference for Peace Fails

LONDON, June 9.—For the second time a peace conference called to end the war between the Balkan allies and Turkey has failed. The second peace conference of London concluded today without the plenipotentiaries reaching a conclusion. The draft of a preliminary treaty had been signed, but the main issues arising from the war are still in dispute.

The break up of the conference followed the departure of the Servian delegates who were recalled by their government. The most disquieting rumors relative to the possibilities of a fresh conflict which will drag in Roumania were circulated.

Says Suspect Isn't Wellesley Intruder

William Fourz, twenty-two, of Natick, was released today by the Wellesley police after Miss Lydia Paten, the Wellesley College sophomore, had declared he was not the man who entered her room early last Thursday morning.

Brown, who was arrested last night on suspicion at Natick, was brought out by Chief Fred Kingsbury of the Wellesley police to the college, where Miss Paten confronted him.

"Is he the man?" asked the chief.

Miss Paten, after looking Brown over carefully, shook her head and said, "No." She then asked that Brown be given his liberty, which was done.

German Steamer Is Fast on Seal Island

YARMOUTH, N. S., June 9.—The German steamship Main, Captain Schacht, from Grindstone Island, Magdalene, with lumber for British ports, struck on Seal Island at 2 this morning and hold fast.

Her forehold is reported full of water. Tugs have been dispatched to her assistance. The steamship registers 1623 tons net.

Sentence Two Robbers.

Emmanuel Deschamps and Joseph F. Breen, both of Lowell, were found guilty in the East Cambridge Superior Criminal Court today of intent to rob Edward O'Connor, March 15. Deschamps was sentenced to from three to five years in State Prison and Breen was sent to the Concord State Reformatory.

ATTORNEY HURLBURT BEFORE GRAND JURY IN WOOD CASE PROBE

Attorney Henry F. Hurlburt, who represented William M. Wood in the Wood-Atteaux-Collins trial, was today a witness before the Grand Jury investigating the attempt to bribe Juror Morris Shuman. He was in the jury room for thirty minutes. Shortly after the jury adjourned till tomorrow morning, when new witnesses will be called.

ISSUE JOHN DOE WARRANT.

Attorney Hurlburt was expected to tell the story of the visit paid him a week ago by a man representing himself as an agent of a detective bureau, who offered his help. Mr. Hurlburt refused to accept the offered assistance.

The jury bribee is known. His arrest was expected to occur today. A man very close to the District Attorney said that sensational developments would follow immediately after the arrest of this man.

A John Doe warrant has been issued and inspectors were hunting for him at noon today. The AMERICAN'S informant said:

"The man who approached Shuman is known. His arrest will precipitate startling developments."

Attorney Hurlburt appeared at the District Attorney's office shortly before noon today, after several witnesses had been examined. Earlier witnesses, it is believed, had corroborated certain details of Juror Shuman's story of the attempt to bribe him. Samuel Ginsberg, one witness, it is said, was approached by a man who sought an introduction to Shuman. Ginsberg was a witness today.

Shumans Tell Story.

Juror Shuman was the first witness to enter the Grand Jury room. He remained there for forty minutes. After him, his sister, Minnie Shuman was called, and then his brother Joseph. The sister is a girl of sixteen, pretty and well-dressed.

Manager Andrew LeClair of the National Detective Agency, which has offices in the Old South Building, and Treasurer Arthur F. Hall of the same agency were summoned as witnesses today. Others who went into the Grand Jury room were: John Queen, who lives in the same house with Morris Shuman; Benjamin Friedman, No. 153 Saratoga street; Patrick Jordan and Edward J. Martin, bartenders at the Hotel Davis, where Shuman says he met the would be jury-briber; Nathan Sodelson, No. 19 Fowler street, Dorchester; Abraham Rabinowitz, No. 29 Millmont street; Jacob Millstein, No. 29 Hale street.

Seek All the Facts.

The Grand Jury hopes to finish its probe in time to report at the public hearing scheduled for Wednesday. The remarkable proceeding of a public hearing was arranged in response to the demand of Attorney Hurlburt that he be given a public opportunity to clear himself of all suspicion in connection with the attempted bribery.

District Attorney Pelletier is determined that the alleged attempt to bribe Shuman shall be cleared up and that the guilty parties be brought before the court for punishment. He is further determined to make the punishment so severe in this case, if possible, that it will be a warning to others not to attempt to interfere with Suffolk county jurors.

Recommend That Waldo eB Ousted

NEW YORK, June 9.—The record of the aldermanic committee appointed to investigate graft conditions, which bitterly assails the police department and recommends the removal of Police Commissioner Waldo, was adopted today. Five committeemen, a majority, signed the report. A fight, made by Tammany men against the Waldo recommendation, was lost. The fifth motion of the report, made public today, accuses Waldo with having openly insulted the law. The report will be submitted to the Board of Aldermen tomorrow.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 9.—Governor James B. McCreary today announced that he would be a candidate for United States Senator from Kentucky at the next election.

DEMAND FOR STATE-WIDE CHILD LABOR INVESTIGATION IS MADE IN LEGISLATURE

Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston today introduced an order in the House calling for a State-wide investigation of child labor conditions in Massachusetts, to determine what legislation is necessary to wipe out the evils of child labor, which the AMERICAN has shown to exist.

The proposed investigation is sweeping in its scope, the order providing for the appointment of a committee of nine members, to investigate conditions in every industry in the Commonwealth, with power to summon witnesses, administer oaths and compel the production of books and papers.

A number of prominent members of the House, real friends of the child workers of the State, who are anxious to better their conditions, have pledged their support to the Sullivan order and are ready to carry the fight for the measure to the very finish.

Proprietors of "sweat shops" and wealthy manufacturers employing child labor, will probably oppose the order. They have already defeated one attempt, last year, in the senate, to bring about an investigation. In that fight they had the assistance of the Republican machine leaders on Beacon Hill.

THE VOTE ON THE SULLIVAN ORDER WILL SHOW WHETHER THESE INTERESTS STILL CONTROL THE LEGISLATURE TO THE EXTENT THAT THEY CAN PREVENT A MUCH - NEEDED INVESTIGATION WHICH WOULD UNDOUBTEDLY RESULT IN GREAT GOOD TO THE COMMONWEALTH.

Back Sullivan Order.

Representatives in the Legislature from practically every manufacturing community in the State have endorsed the Sullivan order. Among them are such prominent solons as Representatives John F. Meaney of Blackstone, the minority leader of the House; Michael J. McEttrick, former Congressman and one of the originators of the child labor agitation in the nation; John C. Sunborn of Lawrence, Benjamin F. Haines of Medford, William J. Napoleon of Natick, Thomas K. P. Wilson of Lynn, John C. Mahoney of Worcester, Edward F. Harrington of Fall River, Timothy J. Meade of Brockton, Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford, Frank Mulvehy of Fall River, Edward F. McLaughlin of Boston, a member of the Social Welfare Committee; Eugene F. Toomey of Lowell, James M. Hurley of Marlboro, John P. Brennan of Cambridge, Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston, Isaac Gordon of Boston, John T. Flanagan of Worcester, John F. McCarthy of Boston, Michael J. Brophy, Edward E. McGrath, P. J. McManus, Patrick B. Carr, Joseph Leonard, Peter Tague, Lewis R. Sullivan, John B. Andersen and Jesse J. Murphy, all of Boston, and a number of others.

Representative Sullivan's order reads:

Ordered, that the Speaker of the House be directed to appoint a committee of nine members of the House of Representatives to sit during the recess and investigate the conditions under which women and children labor in the various industries and occupations; whether any of the present laws are being evaded, and, if so, how to prevent such evasions, and also to ascertain whether it is advisable to change any of the existing laws on the subject of the employment of women and minors.

The committee shall have the power to summons witnesses, administer oaths and compel the production of books and papers. The committee shall hold public hearings at the State House and may travel to any part of the Commonwealth and shall receive such compensation, and may incur such expenses as shall be approved by the Governor and Council.

The committee shall report to the next General Court not later than the first Wednesday in January, 1914, with such recommendations as they may deem advisable.

Expects Struggle.

Representative Sullivan said today that he expected that in an effort to defeat an investigation, opponents would argue that it was unnecessary in view of the fact that a child labor bill has already been passed. He declared that he would answer this argument by showing that children are being employed in the State in violation or evasion of existing laws and that the only way to remedy this evil is by making an investigation to determine where and how these violations are practised and how they can be prevented.

He said further that he expected opponents would argue that a bureau of labor has been created, which has the power to make the proposed investigation. "This board," says Representative Sullivan, "has not yet been appointed. When it is appointed, if ever, it will have a hundred and one things to do. The child labor question is of such vital importance to the State that a body which investigates the subject should give up its entire time to the work."

"There is a crying demand for such an investigation," said Representative Sullivan today. "The child labor laws in this State are practically a joke and are being evaded every day by scores of factory and sweatshop owners.

"There is no practical difference in the conditions now and what they were twenty years ago, when there was such an outcry against the sweatshop system."

SWIFT HIS OWN DETECTIVE IN ICE INQUIRY

Attorney-General James M. Swift today visited the offices of every big ice company in the Metropolitan district, and questioned the dealers as to their business methods and their "competition."

He demanded that they produce their books, and made careful notes on some of the entries, which it is understood throw light on the charge that a practical agreement exists among the companies, by which competition is reduced to a minimum. Some books and papers were taken to his office for a more careful examination.

While the Attorney-General was quizzing ice barons, six State Policemen were working quietly in different parts of the district, investigating complaints of high prices, bad service and discrimination.

The Attorney-General and the police, however, refused to make public any of their discoveries. Mr. Swift plans to prepare a comprehensive report on the ice business to present to the Legislature, and it is predicted that sensational revelations will be contained in this report.

Letters received by the Attorney-General since the adoption of the House order for an investigation, fathered by Representative Martin Hays show that in some parts of Boston, where ice is sold for twenty-five cents a hundred pounds, the dealers say they do not attempt to sell the exact weight, but sell a "100-pound piece," which may mean the scales anywhere between sixty pounds and the legal weight.

A Dedham man writes Attorney-General Swift that he weighed the ice he received for one month on scales guaranteed by the State sealer and found he was getting only three-quarters of the amount he paid for. The company thereupon informed him that the ice sold was sold by the piece, not by weight. When the bill came he was charged by weight.

Eastman Kodak Co. Sued as Monopoly

BUFFALO, June 9.—A petition in equity was filed by the Department of Justice today against the Eastman Kodak Company of New Jersey and New York and against George Eastman, Henry A. Strong, Walter S. Hubbel and Frank S. Noble, restraining them from engaging in a combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. It is alleged that the defendants maintain a monopoly of photographic cameras, films, plates, papers and general photographic supplies.

The Eastman Kodak Company of New Jersey is a stockholding concern with a capital stock of $35,000,000. It is maintained that in order to secure its monopoly, the company sold its goods under restrictive conditions, intended to exclude the goods of competing manufacturers and dealers.

Four More Dropped in Weather Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Secretary of Agriculture Houston today announced the suspension of four more employes of the weather bureau because of their alleged political activity in behalf of Willis Moore, former chief of the bureau. The four men suspended pending further investigation are: Nolman B. Conger, inspector at Detroit, Mich., J. Warren Smith, professor of meteorologie at Columbus, O.; Roswitte E. Pollock, section director at Trenton, N. J.; and Henry B. Hersey, inspector at Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Fisher Bride in Wellesley Romance

Opera Singer Weds Morgan Butler, Formerly of Harvard.

Many Boston friends of Bernice Fisher, the former Wellesley girl and Dana Hall student, and now a grand opera prima donna, attended her wedding today at Evanston, Ill., to Morgan Butler of No. 486 Beacon street, in the Back Bay. Prominent Chicago people were present, and most of the Chicago Opera Company.

The romance dates back to Miss Fisher's school days at Dana Hall. Butler was in Harvard. He lived at home, motoring to Cambridge daily. Too some motor came in handy to run out to Wellesley ones in a while, and when Miss Fisher finished school Butler urged they be married at once.

"I'm going to win out first," she said.

BERNICE FISHER, Morgan Butler's bride today, as Gretel in the opera of "Haensel and Gretel."

"Give me time to study a while and really make a success at singing and then—well, we'll see."

Miss Fisher studied here and in Europe. Her home is in Evanston, and there, during the Summer, when opera does not call her, she teaches a Bible class—of young men. She and Butler were married today in the church where she has taught. They plan to live in New Bedford and will be "at home" after September 2.

Loses Long Death Race.

HAVERHILL, June 9.—Professor Clarence Lewis of the University of California arrived here one day after the death of his five-year-old son, who had been taken ill a week before. Mrs. Lewis and the baby were living here. When the baby became sick, the father secured leave of absence but arrived too late.

Schaefer, No. 5 Ossipee road, West Somerville. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. I. J. Mead. Miss Vivian Beers will be bridesmaid and George W. Fletcher best man. The ceremony will be followed by a reception. The couple will reside in Bangor.

ETTOR TELLS BARBERS NOT TO FEAR POLICE

Joseph J. Ettor, I. W. W. organizer, addressed a meeting of 250 striking I. W. W. barbers at No. 284 Commercial street at noon today.

"Don't be afraid of the police," he said. "They won't hurt you. Anyway, it's better to be in jail than working fourteen hours a day at $9 a week. A man met me at the station here—he was crying. Said his brother had just been arrested. 'How long has he been in jail?' I asked. 'Ten minutes,' he said. I laughed at him. 'Why, man, I was in jail ten months,' I told him. 'It's not bad.'

"But you don't need to go to jail. Don't beat up the scabs. Just find out where they live and let their neighbors know they're scabbing. No man wants to be branded as a scab. They'll join you.

"You used to work fourteen hours a day. You're asking ten. That's right. That will add four hours a day—twenty four a week—a whole day to your life every week. Fight for it. Stick together. You'll win."

The barbers followed Ettor to the I. W. W. headquarters at No. 104 Hanover street after he finished speaking, and thronged the streets, but the police had no difficulty in keeping the sidewalk open and there was no disturbance.

Several hundred striking barbers greeted Ettor on his return to Boston, and escorted him to the Commercial street headquarters. Details of police were stationed in the vicinity, fearing an outbreak of possible violence.

The striking barbers today began an attempt to spread the strike to Malden, Everett, Somerville and other outlying districts of Greater Boston. Two hundred men were sent in "flying squads" of twenty-five to fifty each to close every shop they found.

In the cut-price shops in the North and West ends today, none but the master barbers were at work. In each of these shops also notices announced that the price of a haircut had jumped to a quarter, and of a shave to fifteen cents.

At A. F. of L. headquarters today it was announced that every A. F. of L. man employed in a union shop was at work. The union had announced that those who did not go to work would be fined $100 and suspended till the fine was paid.

Puts Congressmen in Schoolboy Class

J. W. Harriman of Harriman & Co., New York bankers, in an interview in Boston today declared every candidate for Congress should pass a civil service test; that congressmen on committees ask questions which "would disgrace an eight-year-old child for their stupidity." Commenting on the stock market situation, he said:

A factor that has been prominent, but is now sadly missing, is the absence of the New England investor. New England has always been a big odd-lot buyer, so big in fact that Colonial results of these purchases were really amazing.

MILITANTS APPLY TORCH TO AVENGE MISS DAVISON'S DEATH; TERROR IN ENGLAND

LONDON, June 9.—The death of Miss Emily Wilding Davison from injuries received when she tried to break up the Derby last Wednesday resulted today in the worst wave of suffragette terrorism that England has yet experienced.

Bands of women here and elsewhere attacked property with amazonian ferocity, ading damage by fire estimated at from $60,000 to $75,000.

The grand stand at Hurst Park race course was consumed by fire. The blaze had been set in the box occupied by the royal family. All that tar had been smeared over the woodwork and the flames spread quickly. By the time the alarm was given the stand was a mass of flames. Despite efforts of firemen to extinguish the fire, it burned eight hours.

At Whig's Cross and Wartbumstow, clubhouses of boating organizations were set afire and scores of small craft were destroyed. At Wartbumstow the flames spread to the surrounding forest, and several villages were threatened. Volunteer firemen fought the blaze for hours before they were able to subdue it.

Headquarters Draped.

The headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union were draped in black today in honor of Miss Davison's memory. Plans were set afoot to hold a public funeral for the dead woman and the cottage will be marked by a mighty procession of women through the streets of London. Leaders of the union hope to have 500,000 women in line.

Miss Davison died Sunday after she was in Epsom Hospital. From the time of her relapse, Friday afternoon, it was evident she could not recover. Christabel Pankhurst, the exiled suffragette, in Paris, sent the following tribute:

Miss Davison died for women. She died to call attention to their wrongs and get them votes. The government's refusal to grant the vote drove her to make protest. Argument has not convinced Mr. Asquith of the seriousness of his position, but perhaps a woman's death will. Miss Davison's memory will live in women's hearts and in history for all time. The soldier has fallen in a war for female freedom.

Mrs. Despard, another militant, said:

Miss Davison was one of those who believed that blood must be shed before the justice of our demands would be recognized. She is as true a martyr as Joan of Arc.

Since the sensational murder trial of Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American who killed his wife, there has not been such a crowd surging about the portals of Old Bailey courts as today, when the criminal cases against six militant suffragettes and one male adherent, charged with malicious damage to property, were called for trial.

Most of the persons in the crowd were women and nearly all of them were mourning for Miss Davison.

Prisoners in Court.

The following were the prisoners: Miss Harriet Rebecca Kerr, Miss Alice Lake, Miss Rachel Barrett, Mrs. Beatrice Anders, Miss Annie Kenney, Miss Laura Lennox and Albert Clayton, an analytical chemist, who prepared explosives for the "dynamite squad" of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Mrs. Flora (General) Drummond had been arrested at the same time as the other prisoners, but she fell sick from voluntary starvation and had to be removed from jail. Consequently she was not held for trial at the same time as her sisters Henry Curtis Bennett, committing magistrate at Bow street, who held the women for trial under the malicious damage to property act on May 15, has since dropped dead of heart disease.

The prisoners have been at liberty on bail in sums ranging from $5,000 to $12,000.

Better bargains than ever this week to keep the

June Stock Adjustment Sale a-humming

"Everybody's buying them" —the June stock adjusting bargains.

We must adjust our stocks.

While the May business, as a whole, was the largest in our history, some stocks are too heavy. They must be reduced. Others are too light. They will be replenished with bargains from manufacturers, importers and wholesalers.

Manufacturers, importers and wholesalers have been quick to seize this opportunity to adjust their stock in June, rather than to wait until July.

Which means compelling bargains in all kinds of dependable Summer goods.

And in addition—

75,000 Workers Tell J. D. They'll Strike

NEW YORK, June 9.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the Standard Oil Company are attacked in a circular sent to the company's employes by the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, inaugurating a campaign for an eight-hour day for the oil and sugar corporations. A strike of 75,000 workers is threatened if the demands are not granted.

Mother Care Saves Barrymore Child

NEW YORK, June 9.—The hospital attendants at Minturn declare that the recovery of the child of Ethel Barrymore (Mrs. Russell G. Colt in private life) is due to the constant care of the mother, who watched baby Ethel night and day through her illness with diphtheria. Mother and child are now at their country home in Mamaroneck.

MISS MARJORIE HOWLAND of Newport and Omaha, who is shocked at the appearance of the average girls, because of the way they paint and powder their faces.

SETTLED FOR $14,000, SAYS MRS. GROGAN

Mrs. Elizabeth Grogan of Brookline says she is to receive $14,000 as a result of her suit against her sister, Caroline Eastman, and the latter's husband, Professor Charles R. Eastman, late of Harvard, in final settlement of the estate of her father, the late Alvan Clark, the famous telescope manufacturer.

According to court records the settlement was for one dollar. This record, says Mrs. Grogan, was made at the request of Mr. Eastman.

Out of the $14,000 awarded her, Mrs. Grogan says she expects to have to pay $3,000 back to Eastman for expenses she says he alleges he incurred in her behalf. "When I pay that and my lawyers' fees there will be little left for Beryl and me," said Mrs. Grogan.

Cardinal Taken to a Sanitarium

ROME, June 9.—The mental trouble of Cardinal Vives y Tuto, the Pope's confessor and one of the most learned members of the sacred college, is attributed to over application to study. He has been removed to a sanitarium.

Miss Marjorie Howland, an Omaha, Neb., society girl who spent her Summers in Newport a few years ago, and who has many acquaintances in Boston, and relatives in Newton, severely criticized New York society girls in an interview at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, where she is staying with her sister, Mrs. Howard Wood.

Miss Howland is shocked, she says, at the way New York girls dress.

"Really," she said, "the unnatural appearance of the girls one sees on Fifth avenue and generally around this city is shocking. Girls of fifteen and sixteen years of age make liberal use of powder puff, rouge stick and lip salve and the first days it was really difficult for me to see the difference between a common girl and a society girl.

"It seems to me a most deplorable sign. Why do they do it? Is it considered smart? Do they think it makes them better looking? I have been in New York a week, and I haven't seen a real fresh young face since I have been here. This town is crazy—just downright crazy. That is the only expression I can find for it.

"A set of people that for the sake of 'society' will sacrifice the very best a nation can produce—youthful, healthy girls; a set that will allow its young girls to fill its engagement books with 'dates' for luncheons, teas, dinners, dances, suppers, theatres, is downright criminal, and in some way or another a stop should be put to it.

"A friend of mine with whom I was at college told me her average day programme. Here it is: Breakfast in bed anywhere between 9 and 12; up in time to dress from a luncheon party, usually only a 'hen' party, with the conversation limited to last night's dance, prospective weddings or engagements, the latest 'risque' play. After luncheon a tea, with dancing or bridge. Home to dress for dinner, then a theatre or dance."

WOMEN REGRET PUBLICITY, BUT PLAN BIG CLUB

Prospective members of a Women's City Club, to occupy the building at No. 9 Beacon street, now housing the Men's Boston City club, are much distressed at the publicity their efforts have received.

"What has been printed is not official," declared Miss J. A. Brunton, secretary to William Filene, and the one in whose brain the idea of a great city club for women originated.

"The news of our proposed organization leaked out in some unaccountable way not known to any one of the committee of thirty, who had sworn secrecy until after our banquet, which is to take place June 20, when it was hoped we could announce to the public a charter membership of many hundreds.

"A grave error was made when the names of Mrs. Eleanor A. Woods, Mrs. Mary Morsn and Mrs. Alice Parker Lesser were mentioned as taking an active part in the formation of the club. They are the leading officials of the Business Woman's Club and our new organization is in no way connected with theirs. We are to form along entirely different lines and there will be no conflict between us."

Mrs. James J. Storrow when asked what she thought the new club may mean to olston said:

"I have long felt the need of a place for women of all occupations and callings to meet together in the same domestic way as do the men in the City Club.

"It is proposed to charge an initiation fee of $10, and $10 as an annual due; of course the question of raising money will be more difficult than with the men, who reap large profits at their club from the sale of cigars and liquor, but we shall hope to make it up with initiation fees."

Mrs. Eva Whiting White, of the Elizabeth Peabody House, and one of the committee of thirty, is enthusiastic over what she believes may become one of the distinctive club features of Boston.

"Boston is also in great need," she says, "of a place where transient women, business and otherwise, may stay for short periods of time while in the city.

"I believe we can show that there is just as much of a demand for a woman's city club as there is of one for men."

Pleated Flounce Latest Femininity

PARIS, June 9.—The mannikins from the Rue de la Paix made a gorgeous display of their latest fashions at the Chantilly race course on the occasion of the running of the French Oaks stake.

The long folds which hung from the waist and even shoulders, and which were popular early in the season, have entirely disappeared and have given place to horizontal draperies. The models look well on women who are tall and slim, but on short persons they have the disadvantage of making them look shorter still and stumpy.

Perhaps the greatest feature of the day is the three-story skirt. This details of three flounces, the lowest being about six inches and close to the hem. These flounces are pleated and are very stiff, and on most of the gowns are made to stand out stiff from the skirt proper. This makes it impossible for the wearer to sit down as the effect of the pleated flounces would then be ruined.

Mrs. Astor Puzzles Hotel Guests Here

Signs as "Mrs. W. H. Force;" and Why the Valet?

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who was Madeleine Force before her marriage, is registered at the Copley Plaza today. She will leave tomorrow for Bar Harbor for the Summer.

There are two mysteries agitating other guests at the hotel.

1—Why did Mrs. Astor register as "Mrs. W. H. Force"—her mother's name?

2—Why does a party of two young women and baby less than a year old require a valet?

Mrs. Astor is accompanied by her sister, Miss Katherine Force, her baby, a maid—and the valet. The party has three rooms on the fifth floor—Nos. 503-505 and 508.

Mrs. Astor has not left her room since arriving at the hotel except for meals. She did not come down to breakfast today. She has had no visitors, and has no engagements today as far as could be ascertained.

The suite in which Mrs. Astor and her party are settled is one of the best in the hotel—on the Dartmouth street side, and costs $28 a day.

Boston Sand Eater Now Has a Rival

William A. Granatelo, the Boston milk dealer who some time ago announced that he has cured himself of indigestion by eating sand, and who has since kept himself in good health by that means, has a rival at Washington.

The rival is Doorkeeper Julien Emmons, sixty-five, of the House of Representatives, who swallows a teaspoonful of sand after each meal. He never leaves home in the morning without a phial of coarse sand. He says he was troubled constantly with severe heartburn, indigestion and kindred ills, until he started the "sand cure." Now he asserts that he is never troubled at all, relishes his food, sleeps like a baby and enjoys life to the fullest.

Miss Keller Not to Teach Royalty

Miss Helen Keller, the marvelous blind woman, today announced that she will next Winter undertake an extensive lecture tour.

Miss Keller, through her teacher and friend, Mrs. J. A. Macy, declared today that the exiled rumor that she would go to Spain to teach two of the royal children who are afflicted as she herself was is not true. Mrs. Macy said:

"Miss Keller will not go to Spain. She will stay at my home here in Wrentham to rest and gain strength till August when she will go to Bay View, Michigan, to lecture at the Chautauqua there. Then she will return here and stay till October when her lecture tour begins."

Chinda Recovers Late Mikado's Gift

PITTSBURGH, June 9.—Viscount Chinda's cigarette case has been lost and found again and in the finding Pittsburgh has been vindicated. The Japanese ambassador was a guest at a banquet here and the case, a gift from the late Emperor, vanished. It was located in the banquet hall and mailed to him.

COOKE-WHALEY ELOPERS READY FOR MARRIAGE

NEW YORK, June 9.—Jess Knoss Cooke and Floretta Whaley, the seventeen-year-old girl for whom he left the Episcopal ministry and his wife, in Hempstead in 1907, are happy in preparations for their approaching marriage.

No clergyman will perform the ceremony, it is announced, but the knot will be tied either by a justice of the peace or by an alderman.

Cooke has had to postpone his marriage owing to the fact that the divorce decree from his first wife, Mrs. Miranda Clarke Cooke, has not been signed by Judge Reed, who granted Mrs. Cooke the decree, at Hartford, Ct.

The two children of Cooke and Miss Whaley, Paul, aged five, and Teddy, a year younger, are to accompany their parents on the trip to New York from Washington Heights, where they are living, when the marriage takes place.

"Well, we have waited for six years," said Miss Whaley when told that the wedding could not take place until the decree had been signed, "and now a day or two longer won't matter greatly. We are all ready for the call, when it comes. But I want it understood that we are not going to be married by any minister. Either a justice of the peace will perform the ceremony, or a Supreme Court Judge, and we will return right to this apartment for the dinner after the wedding."

In the six years since they eloped, they have lived in different cities, Cooke being employed as a painter. He has been employed lately in the Woolworth building, in New York.

In the divorce proceedings in Hartford, Mrs. Cook asserted that she only desired the happiness of her former husband, and when she was assured that she would receive her decree, she said she hoped that Cooke would at once marry Floretta Whaley.

Baseball Romance to End in Marriage

A romance, begun three years ago at a baseball game between Milford and Hyde Park, will culminate Wednesday at South Framingham, in the marriage of Miss Lucy E. Madden of South Framingham to Thomas J. McKenna of Hyde Park. Mr. McKenna was the pitcher who won the game for Hyde Park and incidentally, an introduction to Miss Madden.

WITHIN THE LAW By Marvin Dana, from the Play of Bayard Veiller

Of a sudden, the Inspector realized with a start of self-reproach, that he was neglecting an opportunity. Therefore, he hastened to make up for his momentary lapse.

"They'd believe this," he said briskly. "Why, this letter sets you clear. If old Gilder should see this letter, there's nothing he wouldn't do to make amends to you. He's a square guy himself, if it comes to that, even if he was hard on you. Why, this letter wipes out everything."

Then, the insistent question beating at his brain forced him to speak roughly, holding hope on the letter's inestimable worth to the woman before him.

"Who killed Griggs?"

There was no reply. And, presently, he went on, half-ashamed over his own intrigue against her.

"Say," he said, and, for once, his voice was curiously suppressed, "you tell me who shot Griggs, and I'll show this letter to old Gilder." Again, the police official was in the ascendant. He forgot his sympathy of a moment ago in his zeal as a tracer of crime. He pledged himself ruthlessly to a lie.

"Now, listen," he cried, eagerly. "I give you my word of honor that anything you say in here is just between you and me." Unconsciously, his eyes darted to the window, behind which the stenographer was busy with his notes.

That single involuntary glance was enough for the keen instinct of the woman to make a guess as to the verity.

"Just tip me off to the truth," Burke went on ingratiatingly, "and I'll get the necessary evidence in my own way. Now, there's nobody here but just you and me. Come on, now—put me wise!"

AGAIN RESOURCEFUL.

Mary was again the resourceful woman who was glad to pit her brain against the contriving of those who fought her. So, at this moment, she seemed pliant to the will of the man who urged her thus cunningly. Her quick glance around the office was of a sort to delude the Inspector into a belief that she was yielding to his lure.

"Are you sure no one will ever know?" she asked, timorously.

"Nobody but you and me," Burke declared, all agog with anticipation of victory at last. "I give you my word!"

Mary met the gaze of the Inspector fully. In the same instant she flashed on him a smile that was dazzling, the smile of a woman triumphant in her mastery of the situation. Her face was radiant, luminous with mirth. There was something simple and genuine in her beauty that thrilled the man before her, the man trying so vindictively to trap her to her own undoing. For all his grossness, Burke was of shrewd perceptions, and somewhere, half-submerged under the sordid nature of his calling, was a love of things æsthetic, a responsiveness to the appeals of beauty. Now, as his glance searched the face of the girl who was bubbling over with mirth, he experienced an odd warming of his heart under the spell of her loveliness—a loveliness wholly feminine, pervasive, wholesome. But, too, his soul shook in a premonition of catastrophe, for there was mischief in the beaming eyes of softest violet. There was a demon of mockery playing in the curves of the scarlet lips as she smiled so winsomely.

MARY EXPOSES RUSE.

All his apprehensions were verified by her utterance. It came in a most casual voice, despite the dancing delight in her face. The tones were crowded in the matter-of-fact fashion of statement that leads a listener to answer without heed to the exact import of the question, unless very alert, indeed.

* * *

This is what she said in that so-casual voice:

"I'm not speaking loud enough, am I, stenographer?"

And that industrious writer of shorthand notes, absorbed in his task, answered instantly from his hidden place in the corridor.

"No, ma'am, not quite."

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and with a pull at the cord sent the shade flying upward. For seconds, there was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. Then, the noise of the ascending shade, which had been hammered on his consciousness, penetrated, and he looked up. Realization came, as he beheld the woman laughing at him through the window. Consternation beset him. He knew that, somehow, he had bungled fatally. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in tumultuous rout.

There was another whose spirit was equally desirous of flight—Burke! Yet once again, he was beaten at his own game, his cunning made of no avail against the clever interpretation of this woman whom he assailed. He had no defense to offer. He did not care to meet her gaze just then, since he was learning to respect her as one wronged, where he had regarded her hitherto merely as of the flotsam and jetsam of the criminal class. So he avoided her eyes as she stood by the window regarding him quizzically. In a panic of confusion quite new to him in his years of experience, he pressed the button on his desk.

BURKE DEFEATED

The doorman appeared with that automatic precision which made him valuable in his position, and the inspector hailed the ready presence with a feeling of profound relief.

"Don't take her back!" he said feebly.

Mary was smiling still as she went to the door. But she could not resist the impulse toward retort.

"Oh, yes," she said, suavely; "you were right on the level with me, weren't you, Burke? Nobody here but you and me!" The words came in a sing-song of mockery.

The inspector had nothing in the way of answer—only sat motionless until the door closed after her. Then, left alone, his sole audible comment was a single word—one he had learned, perhaps, from Aggie Lynch:

"Hell!"

* * *

PART II.

BURKE was a persistent man, and he had set himself to getting the murderer of Griggs. Foiled in his efforts thus far by the opposition of Mary, he now gave himself to careful thought as to a means of procedure that might offer the best possibilities of success. His beetling brows were drawn in a frown of perplexity for a full quarter of an hour, while he rested motionless in his chair, an unlighted cigar between his lips. Then, at last his face cleared; a grin of satisfaction twisted his heavy mouth, and he smote the desk joyously.

"It's a cinch it'll get 'em!" he rumbled, in glee.

His presse the button-call, and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy. When the detective appeared a minute later, he went directly to his subject with a straightforward energy usual to him in his work.

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Gilder?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Davey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied, "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. . . . He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

Burke's broad jowels shook from the force with which he snapped his jaws together.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the third degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals, one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime, all right."

Burke reflected for a moment and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Gilder and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here and tell me that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Garson here in just five minutes. . . . Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman promptly entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

To Be Continued Tomorrow

MRS. HEYE TO INVOLVE NAMES OF FINANCIERS

Mrs. Blanche Williams Heye, the former Wellesley Hills girl who left her modest home there to marry a New York millionaire and then developed such a taste for luxuries that in her divorce suit she asked $78,000 a year alimony and was allowed $15,000 a year, declares she will attempt to have the case tried in New York instead of Brooklyn, and says that not only Mr. Heye but other millionaires are going to get some unpleasant notoriety before the suit is over.

The attempt to have the divorce trial shifted to New York is the result of Justice Aspinwall's bitter criticism of "poodle dog society women," which followed Mrs. Heye's appeal for $78,000 a year alimony. Mrs. Heye says:

"Perhaps Judge Aspinwall has been badly disappointed in love. I have come to the conclusion that anybody that lives in Brooklyn is incompetent to pass upon a case involving $200,000."

Mrs. Heye declared she was her own detective in preparing for the trial of her husband, and told of trailing him and another woman in a taxicab. In her $10,000 a year apartments at the Hotel Langdon, New York, she said:

"We are going to attempt to have the trial transferred to New York. Since Justice Aspinall's childish tirade against women in general at the hearing, I have come to the conclusion that anybody who lives in Brooklyn is incompetent to think about a case that involves an expenditure of $200,000 a year out of a $300,000 a year income—much less to pass upon its merits."

MYRTLE VINCENT, named by Mrs. Blanche Williams Heye in her suit against her husband.

Protest Removal of Mt. Ida Trees

A meeting of protest will be held this evening by the Meeting House Hill Improvement Association against the plan of the Park Commission for the development of the new Mt. Ida playground. The plan necessitates the leveling off of a forty-foot hill now covered with trees and shrubbery which furnish a shady spot for the mothers and daughters in the neighborhood. Councillor Earnest E. Smith has been invited to attend to tell why he voted against the appropriation for the improvement of the playground.

New England Typos Meet in Convention

WATERBURY, Ct., June 9.—The fourth annual convention of the New England Typographical Union brought seventy-five delegates here today. President James M. Lynch of the International Union was present. President Edward H. Martin of Boston presided. Reports of the executive committee stated that conditions were better in New England than ever, there being fifty unions with 3,913 members and an increase of 218 members for the year.

Don't Blame the Drunkard

He's More To Be Pitied Than Blamed—How To Help Him

No one better than the victim himself knows the strength of the chains that hold him in bondage. Pity him. Help him. Don't kick him and cuff him and discourage him. He can be rescued without knowing what cured him.

Just to show what you can do for him, take the case of Mrs. L. A. Woods, a real estate agent in Dade City, Florida, whose cook—a girl 20 years old—got drunk every Saturday night. Mrs. Woods gave her one dose of Renova in a glass of soda. The poor girl didn't know she was taking Renova, but hasn't had the slightest desire for liquor since.

If you know anyone who ought to quit drinking you have a duty to perform; give him Renova; just go to Riker-Jaynes for a package and put a little of it in his tea, coffee, soups, etc.; he won't suspect it at all because it's tasteless and guaranteed absolutely harmless.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a dollar package, write in confidence to The Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of inconvenience.

LEAPS OUT OF DITCH AND IS HIT BY AUTO

Joseph Sortella, forty-six, of No. 1 Unity street, North End, was injured today by an automobile owned by the Guarantee Trust Company, No. 1165 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and operated by Daniel F. Dulley of No. 54 Fairfield street, Cambridge.

Sortella was at work at Spruce and Beacon streets, Back Bay, when struck. He suffered contusions and abrasions of the left side, left elbow and knees, and was taken to the Relief Hospital for treatment.

Sortella was digging a ditch for a pipe, and did not see the approaching machine. Almost within a yard of the auto he climbed out of the hole and was struck by the machine before the driver could see what had happened.

The machine was going slowly, and stopped within a couple of feet of the accident. Dulley got out to see whether he could render any assistance, and did everything possible for Sortella. He was not arrested.

Mayor's Laundress Saves Woman's Life

Mrs. Annie Berrigan, Mayor Fitzgerald's laundress, through her presence of mind, saved the life of Mrs. Celia Weener, who attempted suicide by drinking a bottle of liniment at her home, No. 80 Granger street.

Mrs. Weener is said to have been dependent because her husband, George Weener, was away from home.

Mrs. Berrigan who lives on the second floor of the tenement, was brought to the scene by the cries of the woman and quickly administered an antidote. Her quick work undoubtedly saved Mrs. Weener's life.

Mrs. Berrigan is the third of those who have assisted in the work of the Fitzgerald household to appear in the limelight recently. Last Wednesday Catherine Coffee, who for years cooked the delicacies that keep the Mayor youthful, was married to John Kelley of Dorchester. The Mayor's janitor, too, got a few paragraphs recently by going on a one-day strike.

EAGLES MARCH AND THEN TURN TO BALL FIELD

Dressed in fancy costumes and led by a dozen bands playing lively music, 10,000 Eagles of New England continued their tenth annual convention parade today with a street parade, followed by athletic events on the National League baseball grounds.

Cheering crowds greeted the marchers all the way from the corner of Clarendon and Beacon streets over Beacon Hill to Washington street and thence uptown to the ball grounds. At the State House the marchers were reviewed by Governor Foss and members of his staff. In front of City Hall hundreds of spectators saw Mayor Fitzgerald review the parade. At his side were the judges, Colonel Edward L. Logan and Lieutenant-Colonel John H. Dunn. Field day prizes were awarded later.

Chief Marshal John R. Cohen was at the head of the six divisions, comprising twenty-seven aeries. There were numerous and spectacular floats. The three hundred members of the Cambridge aerie were in caps and flowing black robes of the Harvard graduate. The Worcester aerie was led by a "Mutt and Jeff" in real life. Another feature was a paper mache eagle perched on a cigar as big around as a barrel. This was from the Cigarmakers' Union.

Twenty-two members of the New Haven, Ct., police department were in line. They are all Eagles. Many of the marchers were clad in white. One aerie was dressed in sailors' uniform.

At the end of the line were sightseeing wagons, with the wives, sweethearts and mothers of the visiting Eagles.

This afternoon came a big baseball game. Tonight the convention closes with fireworks on Boston Common.

ENGLAND HUNTS NAVY PLANS AND KAISER'S AGENT

NEW YORK, June 9.—The British home office has requested every newspaper and news agency in London, maintaining an office in New York, to aid it in locating Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, the former German confidential agent who was released from a Scottish jail under agreement to enter the English secret service against Germany. The Central News among others has received this request, and the New York American offices have already been visited by representatives of British interests in search of the desired information.

The plans of two of the latest type of British battle cruisers, the Ajax and the Queen Mary—which were recently guarded by the British admiralty—are in the possession of a rival government, according to a new revelation made today by Dr. Graves.

The English people will learn of this astounding leakage of their naval secrets for the first time when this news is cabled to London, Dr. Graves says.

"Early in February, 1911," he said, "I was back in Berlin. Announcement had just been made that Viscount Haldane, minister of war for Great Britain, was to pay a visit to Germany, ostensibly for a trip to the Black Forest.

"I received one morning an order to appear at 11:30 a. m. at the German Foreign Office. I presented myself at that hour and was shown, after a short wait, into the sanctum of Geheimrat Graf Von Wedell, privy councillor and equerry to His Imperial Majesty. From there we went to the chamber of Herr Von Kiderlen Waechter, then head of the German Foreign Office.

"My interview with Von Kiderlen Waechter was brief. I was told that by virtue of my personal acquaintance with the French secret agents I was to hold myself in readiness to be near His Excellency on the forthcoming trip to the Black Forest and his meeting with Lord Haldane."

Classmates Will Be June Brides

Many Invitations Are Out for Coming Ceremonies.

Myrtle Davenport and Jenny Carola Kristensen, classmates in the Somerville High School, who graduated in 1909, will be married within a few days of each other this month. Miss Kristensen will marry Louis W. Johnson of Dorchester, captain of the Page Class baseball nine at the Dudley Street Baptist Church.

Miss Kristensen is the daughter of Mrs. Karoline M. Kristensen of No. 54 Victoria street, West Somerville. She and Johnson will be married June 25, at her home. Miss Sophie Marie Kristensen will be bridesmaid and H. Fred Swensen, a senior at Luther College, Decorah, Ia., will be best man.

Miss Davenport and Frank Elliott Hopkins of Jamaica Plain will be married June 11 at the residence of the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Foster L. Davenport, North Somerville. Over one hundred invitations have been sent out for the reception.

Naval Stores Men Saved from Jail

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for Florida, imposing a jail sentence upon two of the officials of the American Naval Stores Company and fines upon others, upon the sherman anti-trust law, was reversed today by the Supreme Court. The officials are: Spencer P. Shotter of Savannah, chairman of directors, who was fined $5,000 and sentenced to three months, and J. F. Cooper Meyers, vice-president, who was fined $2,500 and sentenced to three months. The court held that the criminal section can be nullified on the ground that it was not specific.

Harvard Donning Class Day Garb

Work on the decorations for the Harvard yard has already begun in preparation for the annual Class Day festival, a week from tomorrow. The trees are being connected by electric wires, from which Chinese lanterns will be hung. Two fountains are being set up in the centre of the yard. As a large part of the yard is occupied by the building operations for the Widener library, it has been necessary to alter the placing of the bands.

Huerta Anxious to Lead Field Forces

MEXICO CITY, June 9.—President Huerta has suggested to his advisers that he take the field in the State of Morelos, leading his federals there against the Zapatista hordes. The insurrection in that district are very active. In a fight near Cuentla Sunday it was reported that Eufemelo Zapata, a brother of Emiliano Zapata was fatally wounded. A passenger train was derailed by bandits of rebels near Tampico and nine passengers killed.

Parsonage Baby Joy to Rockefeller

NEW YORK, June 7.—John D. Rockefeller was particularly happy yesterday when he went to the Baptist Church in Tarrytown and heard the Rev. Mr. Brooks, the pastor, announce from the pulpit that the youngest member of the Sunday school was born last Saturday in the parsonage and was named Arthur T. Brooks, Jr. Arthur is the first boy ever born in a Baptist parsonage in Tarrytown and the first baby born into a minister's family there in sixty years.

LOBBY EXISTS, CONCLUSION OF SENATOR REED

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Senator Sutherland, Republican, of Utah, testifying before the Overman lobby committee today, confessed to owning 2,000 shares of mining stock which he valued at about five cents a share, and 2,850 shares of stock in the Amalgamated Sugar Company, worth $10 per share.

His interest in mines and sugar would in no way influence his vote, said the witness.

Senator Reed of the investigating committee declared that a lobby exists and in proof of his assertion called the attention of the committee to the number of legislative agents of the Capitol when Congress reconvenes.

The Senator said he had talked with many of these lobbyists. Among them were representatives of the wool and sugar interests, the dye industry and the banking, insurance and cotton industries.

Reed did not name the lobbyists.

Four Adrift 3 Days in Fog Reach Shore

After having been astray on the Atlantic in dories since last Friday morning, with nothing to eat except a raw haddock which they caught, Edward La Blanc, Leo Smith, John Haney and Robert Leighton, all members of the crew of the Boston fishing schooner Washake, drifted ashore near Chatham today. The men were found in a dory, while hauling their trawls. Efforts on the part of the schooner's captain to find them were unsuccessful. The men came to Boston by train. Meanwhile the flag on the Washake had been raised from half-mast.

Blaze Wipes Out Amusement Park

NEW YORK, June 9.—Paradise Park, an amusement resort at Fort George, in upper New York city, was wiped out by fire today with a loss of $100,000. Residents in neighboring houses and apartment buildings were panic-stricken by the blaze and the possibility that the fire would spread. The inmates of the Isabella Heimath Home for Aged Women nearby were terrified and two women had a difficult time keeping the women from fleeing. The fire was started in a dance hall, and as most of the buildings were frame it spread quickly.

PILGRIMS MEET CARDINALS IN SECOND CLASH

BATTING ORDER TODAY.

ST. LOUIS, June 9—The hustling Boston Pilgrims will meet the Cardinals in the second game of their series here today. The Bostons won the first contest yesterday by the score of 5 to 3 and will fight hard in order to triumph again today.

The Cardinals have been playing poor ball during the past two weeks. They have lost eleven out of fourteen games and have dropped from third to sixth place, and now only have a slight lead on the Pilgrims. Stallings hopes to pass St. Louis during the present series.

Bill James, who is touted as a second Mathewson, will probably pitch for Boston today. The coast hurler has been having some trouble with his bread winner, but will be started against the Cardinals today if he feels right. Otherwise "Hub" Perdue may be given a chance to do mound duty.

"Silent" John Titus and Dick Rudolph caused the downfall of the Cardinals in yesterday's game. Titus' homer and single were responsible for four of Boston's runs.

Rudolph was as steady as a rock in the pinches. He proved that he is as cool as they make them in the fourth inning, when the bases were filled with nobody out. The youngster put on speed and fanned Mowrey and Konetchy, two of the Cardinals' best hitters, and forced Magee to roll an easy grounder to McDonald.

Captain Bill Sweeney was out of the game with an injured ankle and probably will not play for several days. In the meantime McDonald will play second base and Devlin third, when Captain Bill gets back into harness McDonald will probably be shifted to the third sack while Devlin will do bench duty.

Surprise at Big Race.

PARIS, June 7.—The Prix de Diane—the French Oaks—which was run at the Chantilly course was won by a outsider, M. Callimiti's Mon, at 34 to 2, which finished four lengths in the lead, going easily, with Comte de Saint Phalle's Cour Supreme, at 8 to 1, second.

New England League Averages

Magee's Batting Mark Is .421

By WILLIAM P. PETERS.

Jimmy Magee, left fielder of the Lowell team, is the premier batsman of the New England League. He has an average of .421, and Carroll, who is runner-up, is seven points behind. The pitchers are working better and, as a result, the number of .300 hitters is decreasing with each week's playing. Just twenty-four players have a mark of .300 or better in the averages, which are published today.

Lowell, which is leading the league, has worked its way to the top by heavy hitting, and six of its players are in the honor division. Lawrence has four; Worcester and Lynn, three each; Fall River, Portland, New Bedford and Brockton, two each.

Mages Leads in Base Hits.

Magee leads in base hits as well. He is second in runs, first in two-base hits and is tied with Wilson of Lynn in three-base hits. Magee is showing his old-time form this season and is making up for last season, when he slumped.

The leading hitters of each club are: Lowell, Magee, .421; Worcester, Carroll, .414; Lawrence, Pearson, .407; Fall River, Devine, .386; Portland, Streeck, .370; New Bedford, King, .362; Lynn, Wilson, .349; Brockton, Rullange, .349.

In pitchers' records, Henderson of Lowell has won four games and he has yet to lose for his club. Martin of Lawrence is second. Jack Bentleman, the former Red Sox twirler, has won more games than any pitcher in the league. He has eight victories to his credit. He has lost four.

Tom Griffith of New Bedford, who was a leading pitcher in the league for several seasons, has yet to break into the win column. He is being played in the outfield more than in the box, however. Benny Van Dyke of Worcester is now showing the form of last season.

Lowell Wins Seven Straight.

Last week Lowell met defeat only once and that was Saturday at the hands of Lawrence. Lowell won seven games in a row until last year's champions beat them out in eleven innings of playing.

Bookies Hold Up Bets on Derby

LONDON, Eng., June 9.—C. Bower Ismey, owner of the horse Craganour, that won the Derby last week and was disqualified, has asked a thorough investigation be made into the charge of fouling by Craganour. Hundreds of thousands of dollars wagered on the race is being held by the bookies until a final decision is made.

President Gaffney Regaining Health

NEW YORK, June 9.—James E. Gaffney, president of the Boston Nationals, who has been seriously ill at his home in this city, was able to go out for the first time yesterday. He is gradually regaining his former strength and expects to be able to visit his office in a few days.

'Porky' Flynn Sails for the Antipodes

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Dan ("Porky") Flynn of Boston has sailed for Australia. He does not expect to return to this country till Thanksgiving Day. He has been guaranteed six fights and a big sum of money. Flynn, it is said, has joined forces again with Joe Woodman. Sam Langford is expected here on the next steamer.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

McDONALD played third base for the Boston Nationals in Chicago. Whether he will continue to do so no one knows but Manager Stallings. The benching of the veteran Arthur Devlin and the placing of McDonald at third base can be traced back to the morning game of Memorial Day, when the Boston team was defeated by the Brooklyns through the failure of Devlin to catch a high fly in the last inning.

If Devlin had caught that fly Stallings' men would have won the game. The ball went high in the air and came down about ten feet to the left of Tyler, who was pitching for Boston. Just as it was about to be caught, apparently, by Devlin, that player suddenly threw up his arms and ducked his head, as though blinded by the sun, and the ball fell safe at his feet.

In talking of the play that same afternoon Stallings said he couldn't understand why Devlin had ducked even if the sun was in his eyes. "If Devlin had kept his hands out and the ball had hit him in the head or the shoulder or fallen safe while he was actually trying to catch it, I could string along with Devlin to the end, but when a player ducks a pop fly like that something is wrong."

Doubtless Stallings did not care to make a change at once and be pestered by questions by the reporters, so he waited until the team got on the road before benching Devlin. The veteran has been playing a fairly good game at third, but it is easy to see that his old-time speed is disappearing. He usually plays ground balls nicely and gets them over to first in good shape, but on plays directed at third base he has been weak.

McDONALD, who took his place, comes from Texas. He was secured from Cincinnati in the trade that involved Johnny Kling. Before the Bostons left for the West Stallings used McDonald frequently as a pinch hitter and he delivered in fine style. It was either a hit or a sacrifice bunt or a sacrifice fly. He seemed to be able to do just what was expected of him. In the field he has shown activity and is undoubtedly a much faster man on his feet than Devlin.

ANOTHER change in the Boston National lineup is the playing of Seymour in centre field in place of Maun. The latter was secured from Buffalo. He made a great impression on Stallings when the Boston team played two games with Buffalo at Charlotte, N. C., on the training trip. Maun batted very heavily and showed himself to be a speedy man on his feet. Stallings got him to speed up his outfield. Maun did not hit the ball very well after coming to Boston, and this doubtless affected his fielding. At any rate, he did not "go well," so Stallings has at last put Seymour in centre garden.

It may be that Stallings figures he can have only so many slow men on his team at one time. With the benching of Devlin the team was speeded up and he had a little leeway, so he averaged up by making another change, putting Seymour into the game, in the hope, no doubt, that the veteran would more than make up for his lack of speed in his stick work.

There is another protest in the National League. They manage to scare up about twenty protested games a year on some pretext. The slightest technicality is good enough ground for a protest in the old organization. On the other hand the American League goes along season after season without a hint of a protested game. The magnates in that organization prefer to have baseball played on the ball field and not at a meeting of American League directors.

The National League magnates do not stop to consider that the more ball games are won on technicalities the more the sport of baseball is injured. What they need in the National League are sportmen at the head of the clubs. There are about three real sportsmen in the organization at present. They need five more to make the eight.

HOT LINERS

Over in Washington where pennant dreams were so vivid when the season started, baseball has become something of a nightmare because of the fact that injuries and suspensions of the different Senators' stars have forced Manager Griffith to play with a patched-up team that has been making only a mediocre showing.

It was explained today that the reason Manager McGraw of the Giants did not use Tesreau and Willis in Saturday's game was because he couldn't find them—they had gone to the theatre. However, the "Little Napoleon" used Mathewson, Marquard, Fromme, Crandall and Demaree, and finally won the game.

The Tigers have three pitchers whose names are Doust, House and Claus, but President Navin asserts that there is not one "cousy" among them.

The Athletics started the week with a record of thirteen straight victories while the Naps, runners-up in the American League race, have amassed thirteen wins out of the last fourteen starts.

Indications at this time are that the crowds that will attend the four-game series in Quakertown between the Naps and Athletics, which starts the latter part of the week, will just about fill up all the seats in Shibe Park.

The predictions that "The Phillies will crack as soon as they hit the road" have proven to be very, very erroneous. Not only have the Phillies failed to perform the little cracking stunt, but they are playing better ball than they did at home.

The Senators have a record of twenty-five victories to date and of this number Walter Johnson has won twelve.

The Giants and Cubs hooked up in a thrilling ten-inning battle yesterday which the Cubs won on a double, a single and an out at first.

CY FALKENBERG HOPES TO BEAT RED SOX TODAY

The Cleveland Naps will resume hostilities with the Red Sox at Fenway Park today. Birmingham's flying squadron is eager to win the first game of the series. They realize that they cannot afford to lose very often if they are to keep up with the Athletics who are playing sensational baseball.

The Red Sox will present a strong lineup against the Forest City team. Jake Stahl is the only member of last year's winning team who will not play and his place will be taken care of by Clyde Engle who is playing a rattling good game of ball.

Larry Gardner returned to the game Saturday when he worked out with the Sox in practice and played for a few minutes against the Naps. Gardner's lay-off, of course, has not done him any good, but Larry is expected to be ole old self in a few days.

Cy Falkenberg will probably start in the box for the Naps today. He has won ten straight games and believes that he is able to take a fall out of the champions.

Falkenberg started in Saturday's game, but had only thrown about six balls when it was necessary to halt the contest on account of rain. There is a possibility that Birmingham may use one of his other mound artists, but this is unlikely.

"Buck" O'Brien or Ray Collins will probably pitch for Boston. O'Brien opened Saturday's game, but was anything but a puzzle to the Cleveland singers, and may not be used in the box today. "Buck," however, was the only Red Sox pitcher who was able to humble Cleveland on the recent western trip.

ALL-STAR CARD OF BOUTS FOR THE ATLAS A. A.

By JACK CONWAY.

Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, who meets Phil McGovern of Brooklyn in the final ten-round bout at the all-star show of the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night, has come to this country determined to prove that he is the greatest boxer of his weight in the world. Ledoux is a confident little fellow and believes that he is able to vanquish Johnny Coulon, "Kid" Williams, Eddie Campi and the rest of the leading bantamweights.

McGovern is a strong, rugged battler, and is sure to make things interesting for the Frenchman. Phil is a brother of "Terrible Terry" and appeared in this city two weeks ago against Johnny Monice of Charlestown.

The rest of the card is well balanced. Joe Eagan is scheduled to clash with "Knockout" Sweeney of New York in another ten-round go. Eagan is one of the classiest lightweights in New England and is eager to meet Matty Baldwin.

"Spider Terry" Brooks of New York and Frankie Mack, the clever Beachmont lightweight, will clash in the other ten-round event. These two men met in an eight-round contest last Tuesday and Brooks won the decision. Mack is confident that he will be able to reverse the tables tomorrow evening.

The opening bout of six rounds will be between Patsy Green of Cambridge and Frank McManus of Belem.

In all there will be thirty-six rounds of boxing. There is sure to be plenty of action, as the boxers are well matched.

Letter at this office for Matty Baldwin.

Dundee Bout Off; Wolgast Plans Rest

LOS ANGELES, June 9.—Tom McCarney, fight promoter, today is hunting around for an opponent for Johnny Dundee, the New York featherweight, to take the place of Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion, who was to meet Dundee in the twenty-round bout on July 4 at Vernon, Cal. Wolgast announced that his hand injured in training was in such shape that he could not fight Dundee and that perhaps he might never be able to fight again. His announcement included the statement that he plans soon to go to Honolulu for "an extended rest."

Rivers and Ritchie May Meet After All

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Perhaps after all Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, and Joe Rivers, the Mexican, will swap punches in a twenty-round bout in this city on July 4. The bout was called off several days ago because Ritchie refused to weigh in at 133 pounds at ringside and Rivers refused to agree to the weighing in early in the morning, which would give Ritchie at least 136 pounds in the ring. Unless one or the other of the managers or fighters balk on this proceeding before evening, it is expected that an agreement will be made that will insure the battle.

Suburban Athletes in Games Today

The Suburban League field and track athletes will engage in their annual outdoor meet at Tufts Oval today.

Medford, Malden and Melrose have strong, well-balanced teams, while Somerville and Everett have entered a few individuals of exceptional ability.

Medford is sure of many points in the middle distance runs and field events, while most of Malden's points will probably be gathered in the sprints and distance events.

Offer Boer Big Bout.

NEW YORK, June 9.—George Rodel, the fighting Boer, who is to meet Gunboat Smith in this city today, is considering an offer to go to France and meet George Carpentier champion of Europe, in a twenty-round bout for a purse of $10,000 in July.

251 ENTRIES FOR RACES AT COUNTRY CLUB

Thoroughbred racing horses from many sections of the United States and Canada will go to the post in the four-days' race meeting of the Country Club, Brookline, that starts Saturday next and continues through June 17, 19 and 21.

It is the first four-days' meeting in the history of the oldest and one of the most important race meetings in the United States and the board of stewards. A Henry Higginson, chairman, had very little effort in assembling a splendid entry. The list which has just closed shows that there are 251 entries with over-night entries allowed in a few of the events of lesser importance.

If half the horses entered start the meeting will unquestionably go to record as being the banner one of many years.

Steeplechases Have Call.

The steeplechases naturally have the call in the entries and there are notably fine assemblies of names set forth in the Chamblet memorial which comes the first day, the guaranteed cash value of which is $2,000 and a cup worth $1,000 presented by Mrs. Lathrop Brown, daughter of the late Robert C. Hooper.

Mrs. Brown has taken the racing name Chamblet of her father. She has three horses entered for The Country Club grand annual, Blue Grass, Bill Andrews and Roland Pardee, and has had them trained especially for the Clyde Park meeting.

Waterspeed Rules Favorite.

There are twenty-one horses entered for the Chamblet. H. K. Vingut, who, in 1911, the inaugural year of this race won with his chaser Waterspeed, will have that horse and Malaga at the post Saturday next.

Last year Waterspeed was entered but scratched because the horse had broken down, but this year it is going in fine shape and if that is the case Saturday, a great race is assured, for there are several great chasers due to start, as a glance at the entry shows.

Twenty-five entries are made for the grand annual, and the 2½ miles is bound to see some exciting sport.

Reopen Entry List.

The entry list for the track and field sports of the Park and Recreation Department, which were to have been held at Franklin Field Saturday but which were postponed until next Saturday because of the rain, has been reopened, and registered athletes who desire to compete may do so by forwarding their entries to Hugh C. McGrath, No. 43 Tremont street.

To Honor Bayne.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—A memorial in honor of Clarence Samuel Bayne, who, at the time of his death, June, 1898, was considered one of the greatest of college baseball players, will be unveiled by the University of Pennsylvania athletic field June 14.

BIG BATTLE TOMORROW FOR POLO CUP

YANKEES AND ENGLISHMEN TO MEET IN HARD CONTESTS

NEW YORK, June 9.—The original American polo team went into final practice today in preparation for its game tomorrow with the English challengers.

The team that will meet the Britons will be composed of Harry Payne Whitney (captain), Lawrence Waterbury, James M. Waterbury and Devereux Milburn, which team won the cup in 1909 and successfully defended it in 1911.

The accident to Foxhall Keene on Saturday, in which he broke his collar bone, makinv it impossible for him to captain the American polo team selected last week, caused the executive committee of the American Polo Association to replace the newly selected team with the old combination.

It was announced by the committee that Keene's absence would take him out of the game, and it was thought best to put J. E. Stoddard and Malcolm Stevenson off the regular team and let the Waterbury brothers fill their positions.

The great match begins tomorrow at the Meadowbrook club, where a fortune has been spent preparing the field of battle for the players and the great crowd which will see them.

The cup defenders will play in their old positions. Devereux Milburn, the only one of the four who had a place on the Keene team, down last Wednesday, will return to his place at back. With the team today withdrawn he was to play No. 3.

Select New Substitutes.

The polo committee also announced that the substitutes for the international games would be: Malcolm Stevenson, L. E. Stoddard, R. L. Agassis, Harold C. Phipps and Rene Lamontagne. Of these Stoddard and Stevenson were members of the four that probably would have taken the field next Tuesday with Milburn and Captain Keene had not a fall at practice Saturday put Keene out of the contest with a broken collar bone.

Harry Payne Whitney will captain the cup defenders, as originally intended, and the Waterburys, Lawrence and J. M., Jr., will be with him in the line of forwards.

The team lineup will be: No. 1, L. Waterbury; No. 2, J. M. Waterbury; No. 3, H. P. Whitney (captain), back, Devereux Milburn.

Perhaps no more formidable band of mallet smashers than the Englishmen ever before appeared for an international match. They can gallop, and check, and hit, and turn, and twist, and, what is still more important, they can stay well to the end.

They play an entirely new brand of polo with a formation of attack and defence which is bound to revolutionize the game. Whether or not these tactics will work against the Americans will be known on Tuesday after the teams leave the field at Meadow Brook. Repeatedly American contestants have proved equal to the occasion at the crucial moment, and everybody is hoping just now that Foxhall P. Keene and his men will repeat the grand work of 1909, when America brought the cup back, and 1911 when the team defended it.

This Westchester cup was originally donated to encourage polo in America—in fact, the world over. To give the propaganda the right sort of a start Hurlingham was invited over in 1886, the Hurlingham Club being honored with the invitation.

English Are Invited.

At that time the great men of polo in the Old World was John Watson, master of the Carlow Hounds in Ireland. The Carlow Club is the oldest polo club in the British Isles. "Big John," as Watson was familiarly called, mustered a team composed of Captain R. Lawley, Seventh Hussars; Captain T. Hone, Seventh Hussars; Captain the Hon. C. Lambton, Malcolm Little, with T. Shaw as substitute. The match took place at Newport, R. I., on August 25.

The American side was represented by Thomas Hitchcock, W. K. Thorn, Jr., Raymond Belmont and Foxhall P. Keene. It is remarkable that Keene is the only man of that lot in active competition today.

Being on their own ground, the Americans were naturally favorites, and they justified the calculation by bobbing their own with the Britishers for forty minutes of the first game. During that period Keene was the star, for after taking the ball from Little he made a goal in forty seconds. Watson then began to feed Lawley as well with his backhanders that England won with a tally of ten goals to four. The British won the second match and the cup with a score of fourteen goals to two.

For thirteen years—till 1902—no serious effort was made to bring back the cup. That year a combination composed of R. L. Agassiz, Sterling Postley, Devereux Milburn, Jr., and Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., sailed in quest of the trophy. The opposition was made up out of Cecil Nickalls, "Pat" W. Nickalls, George Miller, Charles D. Miller and Walter Buckmaster.

Change Helps Defenders.

In the first match the Americans were victorious by two goals to one. Buckmaster was the English captain and played at No. 3, but he did not like the way matters were going, so he changed the lineup around and took the back position himself. It was a wise move, for England won the second match by six goals to one, and the third match by seven goals to one.

It may be inserted that in 1900 some Americans found themselves in London, and they organized a challenge which did not go further than one match.

All this time the Americans were trying to play with an inferior class of pony. They had an idea that a mustang, on account of his toughness of fibre, should make the ideal polo mount, never thinking for a moment that the ideal polo pony must have a fine mouth and be possessed of that pliability, temperament, never met with in the little horse of the plains, or in any animal possessed of his strain of breeding.

Between 1902 and 1909 Harry P. Whitney appeared in the role of a polo player, and he at once conceived the idea that America could not win without the right brand of pony. Consequently he began searching for the proper sort of galloping material. With his financial resources, he easily found what he wanted, and in due course a challenge was sent for 1909. When Whitney landed at Hurlingham it was at once admitted that his mounts were superior to the English. His team was composed of L. Waterbury, No. 1; Monty Waterbury, No. 2; H. P. Whitney, No. 3, and Devereux Milburn, back.

America Regains Cup.

The Americans played right through as named and showed wonderful team work. The Englishmen against them in the first match were Captain Wilson, F. M. Freake, P. W. Nickalls and Lord Wodehouse. The match was won by nine goals to five, a considerable amount of the success going to Milburn at back. After such a drubbing, the Englishmen put Harry Rich at No. 1, in place of Captain Wilson, and Captain Hardress Lloyd supplanted Lord Wavehouse at back. The new line-up did not do even as well as the old one, for America won by eight goals to two, and the cup came home.

The feature of the English team was the unwavering play of F. M. Freake, who is here now as a substitute. Even in the face of defeat he never swerved and rode and slashed to the last second of the match. Over this match the English Selection Committee came in for some hot shot for not including Walter S. Buckmaster on the original line-up.

Right after the cup came away from England there was talk of preparing a team for an American invasion in 1910, but it oozed out when the expenses were understood. However, a challenge came for 1911, but to get the ponies and the men here there was no distinctive financial backing.

The cost of the trip meant an expenditure of $35,000, and to gather the sum the Hurlingham Club made an appeal to its friends. How much money was really collected will never be known, but finally Captain Hardress Lloyd, with Captain Cheape, Captain Edwards and Captain Wilson landed at Meadow Brook.

It was at once concluded that they were poorly mounted, and those who thought they knew had it that their style of play was useless against the American "Big Four"—Messrs. Whitney, Milburn and the Waterbury brothers. Odds of 5 to 1 were freely offered that the cup would stay here, but the betting was quite different after the men took the field.

Hold Americans Even.

The practice of the Englishmen was listless and minus the least feature of first-class polo. Those who watched the first match at Meadow Brook could hardly believe their eyes when the Englishmen were seen to even matters up with the home team.

Cheapa and Edwards were towers of strength up in front, and had they better ponies the tally might have been the other way. Every moment of the eight periods proved exciting, America finally winning by six goals to 5. Eight days elapsed before the second match came off, and if anything it was closer than the first. At one time matters looked as if the Englishmen would scratch out a victory, but the Americans stalled them off always at the right instant and won by 4½ goals to 3½.

After the Englishmen went home the [illegible] was suspended [illegible] Cheapa and Edwards [illegible] here again, and they will have behind them Ritson at No. 3, and doubtless one of the cleverest polo'sts, as well as Locket, a back of exceptional merit.

The Duke of Westminster financed the invaders this time, and loaned the best of his ponies. If the Englishmen lose they cannot blame it on the ponies, nor can they claim that they have not been lucky in the practice matches, for not a man has suffered a scratch. It is somewhat the other way with the Americans, for the two accidents to Milburn, although not very serious, completely upset the practice work, and the team was not selected till almost the last moment.

Pay Last Tribute to Chris Von der Ahe

ST. LOUIS, June 9.—The funeral of Chris Von der Ahe, owner of the "four-time winners," the St. Louis Browns of the old American Association, took place yesterday and was attended by a notable group of his former associates. The body of the former baseball magnate was interred beside the tombstone he purchased in his prosperous days of fifteen years ago. The pall-bearers were Ban Johnson, president of the American League; Charles A. Comiskey, C. P. Spink, James Davis, Ted Sullivan and William Gleason. Jack Gleason and George G. McGinnis.

Harvard Oarsmen Enjoy Long Sail

RED TOP, Ct., June 9.—The Harvard crews had a long sail yesterday on Lars Anderson's "Roxana," going down Long Island Sound as far as Greenport, where the vessel anchored and the crews were allowed to have a dip in the ocean, which was taken advantage of by nearly all in spite of the cool air. They left the quarters at eleven o'clock. The crews arrived back shortly after six o'clock, all reporting as enjoying their trip greatly.

Yankee Tennis Stars Fight for Victory

TODAY'S MATCHES.

Singles.

Maurice E. McLaughlin, America, vs. Stanley Doust, Australia.

R. N. Williams, America, vs. A. Booth Jones or Horace Rice, Australia (probable.)

NEW YORK, June 9.—A big crowd of tennis enthusiasts were at the West Side tennis courts today for the final clash between the American and Australian tennis teams in the elimination battle for the Davis trophy.

The Australians by their victory in the double on Saturday made the count before today's game 2 to 1 in favor of the Americans.

In today's game Maurice E. McLoughlin, the Californian, will go against Stanley Doust, the Australian captain, whom he really defeated Friday, and Richard Norris Williams, the American, will meet either A. Booth Jones or Horace Rice in the final game in case McLoughlin does not win his game from Doust.

Skelton to Captain Cornell Track Men

ITHACA, N. Y., June 9.—A. M. Skelton of Dunkirk, N. Y., has been elected captain of the Cornell track team for next year. The election is unprecedented, as Skelton, who is a Law lundist, is not a "C" man, for he failed to win a place in the intercollegiates entitling him to the letter.

However, no other junior obtained a "C" and Skelton was voted the best man in the class for the place. Men who made thirteen of Cornell's 17¼ intercollegiate points will be graduated this June, which leaves only sophomores among the winners for the nucleus of next year's representatives.

St. Paul Gets Brandt.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 9.—We purchase by the local American Association Club of Pitcher Brandt from the Boston Americans has been announced here.

LEADING WOMEN GOLFERS CLASH AT BRAE-BURN

A very classy field of women golfers was on hand at the Brae-Burn Country Club today for the first eighteen holes of medal play in the annual Eastern Women's Golf Association championship.

A good gallery turned out to see the women players start and the notables in the field had a following throughout the round.

The women left the first tee in the following order:

Miss [illegible] Davis, Philadelphia Cricket, and Miss K. [illegible] Dunbar, Brae-Burn.
Miss [illegible] Bird, Brookline, and Miss M. [illegible] Phelps, Brae-Burn.
Mrs. [illegible] Pulitz, Vesper, and Miss M. K. Wetmore, Newport.
Miss [illegible] Barlow, Merion, and Miss D. A. Curtis, Chestnut Hill.
Miss M. Cilvrey, Melrose, and Miss G. Dorgan, Brae-Burn.

A Story of Baseball, Big Business and the Real Thing in Romance

THE TRIPLE TIE

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

The Most Absorbing New Serial Any Newspaper Has Published in Years

What Has Gone Before

GORDON KELLY, a young man from the mountains, who says that he has never played on any ball club and that he has never even seen a ball game in his life, joins the Atlanta club and by his phenomenal playing becomes the sensation of the baseball world and the Boston Red Sox buy his release for $50,000. In the meantime, he meets and falls in love with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a rich timber speculator. In his final game in Atlanta Gordon hits a terrific smash. He sends in three runs, but in sliding for home he crashes into the catcher, is knocked unconscious and his leg is broken. Mildred Deery runs on the field and takes his head in her lap. The night after Gordon Kelly leaves the hospital he disappears as if from the face of the earth.

When Galen Deery reads in the papers of how his daughter figured on the ball field, he is thunderstruck and arranges to take her up to his bungalow in the mountains. Forrest Cain, a rich young man, who has become Gordon's enemy, also loves Mildred. He follows her and calls on her every day, until he is called back to Atlanta on his sister's illness. One day Mildred goes on a fishing trip with Elmer Sheppard, a boy, and is surprised by the sudden appearance of Gordon Kelly. For a moment he holds her in his arms, and then they are interrupted by Elmer. Gordon says he lives there.

Gordon Kelly's disappearance greatly worries the Red Sox management and detectives endeavor to find him, but in vain. Just late in August, Farnsworth, the sporting editor of the Atlanta "Georgian," recalls the incident in which Mildred Deery figured, ascertains from her father where she is, and starts for the mountains.

Now Go On with the Story

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

CHAPTER XXVI.—(Continued)

"I JUST kaint do nothin' this even-in," drawled Mr. Case. "Tomor-rer, mebbe."

"But I want to get back to Atlanta as soon as possible," declared Farnsworth.

"Ef we started right now we wouldn't git there till sundown," replied Mr. Case. "I reckon you wouldn't want to turn 'round and come right back, would ye?"

"If I waited until tomorrow where could I sleep?"

"I reckon I kin fix that," replied the other.

Another glance at the figure of his would-be host told the young man from Atlanta that he would have to make the best of it, but he swore by the hump of the sacred camel that Few Creek would never see him again, once he finished his business there. In the course of time he learned that Case was a widower and was his own housekeeper. The shanty looked it. How he existed was beyond comprehension, unless it was through wayfarers like the present guest.

Hard on Farnsworth

Farnsworth, who was used to action every minute of his waking hours, found himself on the verge of nervous prostration waiting for the time to pass. Along about sundown Case made preparations for the evening meal, with a deliberation that scorned every appearance of haste. The supper consisted of bacon, cornmeal made into cakes and a black decoction that Case said was coffee. As soon as it grew dark Farnsworth sought repose, but did not get it, on a mattress stuffed with corn shucks.

Only the hope of getting on the track of Gordon Kelly prevented Farnsworth from jumping a freight train that passed through Few Creek early next morning. He was up hours before the alleged bonfiace, and it was as much as he could do to get Case to hitch up his sorry-looking horse and make a start before 9 o'clock. After nearly two hours of up-hill riding they arrived at the Deery bungalow.

A young woman was reclining in a Gloucester hammock strung on the porch. Farnsworth jumped out of the conveyance and walked right up to her.

"Are you Miss Deery?" he asked.

"I am Miss Deery," replied Mildred, coming to a sitting posture.

A Volley of Questions

Without giving her time for thought Farnsworth said sternly:

"Where is Gordon Kelly?"

Mildred gave a little gasp and her eyes opened wide.

"I—I—don't know," she stammered. "When did you see him last?" Farnsworth was like a lawyer in cross-examination.

"In June."

"You saw him up here?"

"Yes."

"Where is he now?"

"I don't know. He disappeared and we can't find him."

"Have you a telephone?"

"Yes."

"May I use it?"

"Yes."

"Please show me where it is."

Taken by surprise Mildred had answered the rapid questions as fast as they were put to her. She now arose and started indoors, followed by the young man. In the few seconds required to traverse the porch, however, she had recovered her wits and at the threshold she suddenly turned.

"Who are you and what do you want here?" she demanded.

"I am a reporter of the Atlanta Georgian."

"Why do you come to me?"

"Because I knew that you knew Gordon Kelly."

"And now you want to telephone your paper. I will not allow you to use the telephone."

"Very well, Miss Deery. I shall return to Atlanta at once," said Farnsworth, stepping off the porch and walking toward his conveyance.

"I Must Think"

"Please wait a moment; I must think," called Mildred. After awhile she added: "Come and sit down; we'll talk it over." They took chairs on the porch.

"What is your name, please," she asked.

Farnsworth told her.

Mildred looked straight out over the mountain for a long while before she spoke again. At length she turned to the young man and, fixing her candid eyes on his, she said:

"Well, Mr. Farnsworth, I did a very foolish thing in Atlanta a few months ago. You know what I mean. But I assure you I would have done the same thing, I believe, if the accident had befallen any of the other players. I had met Mr. Kelly, but I really knew him only slightly. The accident completely unnerved me. I suppose the newspapers had to print what they did, but you can imagine how embarrassing it all was to me." She paused a moment and then continued. "Now you came up here because you thought you might get some news of Gordon Kelly, did you not?"

"That is right."

"Well, suppose we strike a bargain. If I tell you all I know about Mr. Kelly coming up here and all I know about his disappearance, will you promise to keep my name out of it?"

"It's a bargain," cried Farnsworth. "But excuse me a minute. Miss Deery, may I not use your phone to tell my paper what I have learned so far and then you can tell me the rest. It is an afternoon paper, you know, and we like to get the news quickly."

"Getting Out Extra"

Mildred took him to the telephone and then returned to the porch, where she planned out just what to say to the visitor. Ten minutes later Farnsworth joined her, his face beaming.

"You may not realize it, Miss Deery, but you have just told me a very important piece of news. It will create a big sensation all over the country. My paper was crazy about it. They're getting out an extra on it."

"Don't forget our bargain," said Mildred with a smile.

"Absolutely so," declared Farnsworth with fervor. He was pretty well pleased with himself. He had unearthed, through his own efforts and without aid, the biggest piece of news of his career. He had visions of a substantial cash present and a raise in salary from his boss. This pleasing thought reminded him that he hadn't smoked a cigarette in twenty minutes. He asked and received permission to smoke.

"This is pretty soft," he said to himself as he threw away the match. "Here I am in the coolest spot in Georgia having a cracking big piece of information handed to me by a pretty woman. Can you beat it? I guess this isn't my lucky day."

But business is business and Farnsworth proceeded to it after three or four puffs of his cigarette.

"Now, Miss Deery," he said, "please tell me the rest of the story."

"Gordon Kelly has lived in this neighborhood all his life," began Mildred. "After he left the hospital he came up here. I met him one day while I was fishing in the brook. I hadn't the faintest idea that he was within a hundred miles of here. I didn't even know at the time that his home was near here. My father built this bungalow recently and I think my parents wanted me to come here on account of what the papers said about me, or rather, to escape the embarrassment I had brought on myself. At any rate I came up and found everything so delightful and so cool and also that I have stayed here ever since.

Then Disappeared

"Well, anyway," she continued after a pause, "you want to know about Mr. Kelly. As I said, I was very much surprised when I saw him here. I think it was the last part of May. I saw him quite often for several weeks. My mother came up again—she is here now—and there was a little boy here, the son of my father's superintendent, and we all used to go fishing and tramping around. Mr. Kelly was good company and he knew every inch of the mountain country.

"One afternoon late in July, Mr. Kelly started off on a walk along the brook that runs near where he lives—I get this from the people at his home—and about half an hour after he started out a cyclone swept along the edge of that brook and from that day to this Mr. Kelly hasn't been seen."

"Was he killed?" asked Farnsworth.

"A good many people around here think so, but I don't. Something tells me he is alive and well and will turn up when least expected. But there was a thorough search of every inch of the path of the cyclone for miles and it is sure that he didn't perish in the storm. That's all I know about the appearance and disappearance of Mr. Kelly, Mr. Farnsworth," said Mildred in conclusion.

The young man arose from his chair and went to the telephone again. He was gone fifteen minutes.

"I want to thank you for all this information, Miss Deery," he said. "But I want to warn you that there will probably be a score of reporters up here tomorrow. I would advise you to keep under cover—return to Atlanta, maybe; otherwise, you will be annoyed a whole lot. While I have kept my promise and will continue to keep it as regards using your name, the other reporters will find out that you live near here and you will have an unpleasant time of it."

"I think that is good advice; I shall speak to my mother about it," replied Mildred.

Useless to Remain

"I don't believe it would do any good for me to stay up here any longer. I suppose the people around here have searched for Gordon Kelly in every conceivable place?"

"They have, Mr. Farnsworth. It would be useless for you to remain, expecting any news of Mr. Kelly."

"Then I will thank you again and start for the celebrated Summer resort, known as Few Creek."

Mildred laughed as he arose to go.

"You cannot get a train before 3:16. Why don't you send that Cracker back by himself and take lunch with us? I will drive you to the station in an automobile."

Clever Mildred Deery. She was so nice to the young man that he would be sure to keep his promise to her.

"Miss Deery," returned the young man, "you are not only very kind, but you are a mind reader. I accept with pleasure. If you could only have seen the meal that John prepared for me this morning."

Farnsworth settled with Case from a big roll of office money. His bill was $1.25 made up of the following items: Supper 25 cents, breakfast 25 cents, lodging 25 cents, hire of horse and carriage and services of driver, half a day, 50 cents.

"I should worry," remarked the young man to himself as Gabe Case drove away.

CHAPTER XXVII.

IT is necessary to go back and pick up the loose threads of this narrative.

When the crisis in the illness of Forest Cain's sister had passed and she was on the road to recovery, Cain wrote Mildred that he was coming to the mountains again, and two days later he appeared where Mildred was, claiming his automobile and also claiming the fulfillment of the promise she had made him to go riding with him alone. Her mind was already prepared for this demand, so after she had learned all about her sister's condition, she expressed her sympathy and told him she would go with him that afternoon if he cared to have her.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

"This is pretty soft," said Farnsworth to himself. "Here I am in the coolest spot in Georgia, having a cracking big piece of information handed to me by a pretty woman. Can you beat it?"

Posed by Florence Shirley (as Mildred Deery) and Henry Hull (as Farnsworth), of the Castle Square Theatre Company, Boston.

Five Hundred Dollars in Prizes for Best Solution of 'The Triple Tie'

Prizes aggregating $500 offerd by the Boston AMERICAN for the best solutions of the great serial novel, "The Triple Tie," as follows:

First prize	$200
Second prize	100
Third prize	50
Fourth prize	25
Fifth prize	15
Sixth prize	10
20 other prizes, each.	5

"THE TRIPLE TIE" will be run in generous daily instalments till June 29, when the final chapter will be published. Toward the very close of the story the serial will end abruptly at one of the most dramatic situations ever conceived by a novelist. Readers will then be asked to supply the solution to the several mysteries that are unsolved when the instalments end.

Begin reading "THE TRIPLE TIE" today. If you have not already done so, and send your solution to the AMERICAN. THIS IS NOT A GUESSING CONTEST. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes.

A synopsis of the last instalment will be placed in the hands of Joseph H. O'Neil, president of the Federal Trust Company. It will be held by him in a sealed envelope until a committee of three citizens not connected in any way with the Boston AMERICAN may select the winners of the prizes.

Address all letters to Mystery Editor, Boston AMERICAN.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any of the Rikey-Jaynes drug stores under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

ROBERT really is quite nice,
Polished and refined;
Quite a man of wealth, besides,
And of cultured mind.

BENNIE is all sentiment,
Oh, how he can talk!
Quite a dude is he, in fact,
With a stylish walk.

THEN, there's James and Henry, too,
Teddy and the rest;
But of all the men on earth,
One I love the best.

TENDER, strong, indulgent, good,
Like the God above,
He loves me unselfishly,
And I love his love.

WHO is this—my ideal man—
One so true and tried
Really, I can't tell, because
He's to be supplied.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

We must go & call on the Sternbecks tonite, sed Ma. You know how much I think of Missus Sternbeck. She is a deer littel lady, Ma sed, even if her taste in dress is a littel wobbly. I know you will not like her husband, brekaus you are not the kind of a man to worship wealth, sed Ma, & that is about all Mister Sternbeck has. He is worth a bagsheed of munny. He cud buy the Panama canal after it is finished, Ma sed, & make a private picnic pond out of it.

I wish we dident have to go, Pa sed. I hate to set & listen to sum fat rich man telling how he started on a shoe string & becuzm his coupon clipping kid. I have often had to set & hear that kind of guff, Pa sed, wen all I had in my pocket was a hard, thin dollar. Isent there sum way we cud git out of all this visiting rich folks?

I wuddent think of disappointing Missus Sternbeck tonite, sed Ma. So we went.

A FINE HOME

The Sternbecks live in a very fine hoam. It is a lot bigger than our flat, but it isent so nice looking, there is too much furniture in it & gold frames, etc. I tosid Ma that & she sed I shud be very careful what I sed. Missus Sternbeck was a deer littel lady, the Ma sed, but Mister Sternbeck was fat & common. He started rite in telling how much his paintings cost and how much wine he had in his wine cellar. I marked down all the amounts in a littel book & wen he saw me doing it he asked me why I was marking down the prices he mentioned. I told him that wen he got all thru I was going to add the figgers up & find out how much munny it wud cost me to keep heirse wen I got to be a self made man. Then everybody laffed exrep him.

I cud see that Pa had an awful grouch on, brekaus he grinned all the time the way he grins at me wen he stands neer the door with a slipper & says "Bobbie, see here a minuit." But the rest of the peepul thot he seemd to be having a good time.

We had a very fine dinner & after the dinner Missus Sternbeck & Ma started to look at sum fashion magazeens & us men went into the smoking room.

Here are some very expensive cigars, sed Mister Sternbeck. They cost me one thousand dollars a thousand. I am glad yure littel son dosent smoak, he sed. It wud seem a shame to waste a dollar cigar on him. Try one of these, he sed to Pa. Stick one in yure pocket for later in the evning, he sed. Or if you wud prefer cigarettes, I have sum choice Turkish cigarettes. They cost me one hundred dollars a hundred boxes, he sed.

Wile I was cutting down the amounts in my littel book Pa & Mister Sternbeck started to play a game of billyards & smoak. This is a fine table, sed Mister Sternbeck. It cost me one thousand dollars & Wilf Hoppe played on it once & sed it was one of the best tables on which he had ever played. Isent that a fine one you are using? he asked Pa. It is, sed Pa. I cud see that Pa was getting colder & colder all the time. I dident think he was ever going to thaw out, but after awile he did, you bet.

Try sum of this Rhine wine, sed Mister Sternbeck. It is very rare. It cost me twenty dollars a quart. Smack yure lips over a glass of it, he sed. Pa drank sum & he did smack his lips. Have another, sed Mister Sternbeck. Expense is nothing to me when I entertain.

PA STARTS IN

So Pa had a other drink & a other, & then he sed How nobel is Wilth. How I admire a man wich can, by the sheer force of his genyus, carve a career to Wilth & Prosperity. Long may you live & wax wealthier, good friend Sternbeck, sed Pa. If there is ever anything I can do for you, call me up or wire me & I will be glad to fly to yure aid. Dont hesitate to call on me, Pa sed. I wud do anything for you.

Then they had two more glasses of wine & Pa sed Well, well! I can't seem to malk a singel shot, but I am proud to be host by a scholar & a gentelman like you. Hevings bless you & all ... e honestly acquired wilth, sed Pa. I wish you was worth a billyon, sed Pa. I wish you the satim, sed Mister Sternbeck.

On the way hoam Pa kep telling Ma what a noble man Mister Sternbeck was. There is one man in a milyun, sed Pa.

I guess munny talks, all rite, & Pa is also, too.

Advice to the Lovelorn

DON'T LET HIM KNOW

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of eighteen years and in love with a man of thirty years. This man is a friend of my folks. He has never taken me out and he is very nice to me, and always talks of getting married. He doesn't know I love him. Please tell me how I could win his love.

A SPANISH GIRL.

SUPPOSE I were to tell you to let him know of your love. You are only eighteen, and girls of that age transfer their hearts easily. If you let him know of your love today, the chances are you will love another man tomorrow. Spare yourself humiliation by keeping your love a secret until he asks for it.

NOT IMPROPER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think it proper for a girl who is keeping steady company to ask the man when she will see him?

A. L. W.

THEIR intimacy warrants such a question from her, but I would not want her to be urgent or persistent, and it is in better taste if she lets him take the initative in making future engagements.

MOTHER SHOULD CALL FIRST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am keeping company with a young lady and wish to know if it is proper for the young lady's mother to call on my mother, or my mother to call on her, my mother being the older. We will soon be engaged.

S. S. L.

SUCH overtures should come from the family of the man, never from the family of the girl.

Their Married Life

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"HELLO! What's that?" Warren was gazing up at the library ceiling with a puzzled frown.

"What, dear?"

"That spot up there—I've never noticed it before. Has it always been there?"

Helen, absorbed in the last number of the "Home Monthly," murmured an abstract, "I don't know, dear."

A moment later Warren jumped up with a sharp—

"I thought so! That's getting bigger. Somebody's upstairs letting a tub run over."

The next moment he was at the 'phone. "See here, there's a leak in our ceiling. Ring up those people over us, the Sanfords, and find out what's the matter—What's that?—— They've gone out?—Well, get the superintendent up there. Tell him they've let the water overflow, and it's coming down through our ceiling. Now you get him up there quick."

Warren hung up the receiver and came back to stand under the spot and look at it more closely.

"I don't believe that's spreading," declared Helen, who had climbed up on a chair. "I'm not sure that it's even—— Oh, yes, it is," as a drop of water formed suddenly in the darkened spot and splashed down almost on her upturned face.

"Some blamed idiot's turned on the water and left it," muttered Warren.

"But, dear, the bathroom isn't over this!"

"Why isn't it? Don't you remember the superintendent said they used this as a bed room and they'd put in an extra bath?"

Another drop splashed down now and the wet spot in the white ceiling was plainly spreading.

"Oh, they're calling about it now," exclaimed Helen, as the phone rang.

NO KEY

"Hello! What's that?" gruffed Warren. "Well, didn't he leave the pass key with you? You mean that because the superintendent isn't here nobody can get in there to turn off that water? Well, I'll see about that."

Warren strode out to the elevator and held his finger on the bell. Helen followed him to the door.

"Dear, he's coming now," as the elevator ropes behind the iron gratings began to move. "Don't keep on ringing."

But Warren did not take his finger from the bell until the elevator was there.

"Are you sure nobody's in that apartment?" he demanded of the boy.

"Yes, sir; it's their maid's afternoon off, and Mr. and Mrs. Sanford's gone out to dinner. I can't get no answer to the phone. The superintendent's gone out, too, sir. He never leaves a pass key and I've got no way of getting in."

"Well, you take me up there. I'll see about getting in."

For a moment Helen stood uncertainly at the door, then as she heard Warren's voice in the hall above her curiosity dominated and she ran up the steps. Warren was at the door trying some of his own keys.

"No use fooling with these," as he put them back in his pocket. We've got to force this lock." Then, turning to the elevator boy, "You go down and get the fireman or whoever's down there. Tell him to bring a good-sized chisel and a hammer."

"But, Warren, you don't want to take the responsibility of breaking in there?"

"Well, I'm not going to have our place flooded through their infernal carelessness. If people haven't any more sense than to go off and leave water running—they OUGHT to have their apartments broken into! Ah, this is something like it," as the fireman, in his soiled overalls and a handful of tools, got out of the elevator.

"But I ain't go no 'chority to break this door open, sir. It might mean my job."

BREAKING IN.

"I'll see to that," Warren reassured him. "I'll shoulder any responsibility that goes with this deal. Now you spring that lock there as quick as you can."

The firemen wedged in the chisel, but the lock was strong and it was several moments before he swung the door open.

Warren rushed in, the elevator boy, the fireman, and Helen after him. Before they reached the bathroom, they found the rugs a pool of water. On top of the overflowing tub floated some American Beauty roses.

With a muttered oath, Warren turned off the faucets. Just how much the water had been left running, Helen could not tell, as the plumbing was of the "improved type," the tub being filled from the side.

"Anybody that hasn't any more sense than to put flowers in a tub and go off and leave the water turned on!" stormed Warren.

"Here," turning to the fireman, "this water's got to be mopped up or it'll be all down in our place."

"I'll have to have some sort of a cloth to get it up with," mumbled the fireman, sullenly unwilling.

"Take these," and Warren jerked from the towel rack some long-fringed, monogrammed towels.

"Oh, dear, wait—wait!" fluttered Helen. "Don't use those—I'll go down and get some old cloths."

"That's all right; you use those towels," ordered Warren. "We've got to get this water up, and get it up pretty blamed quick."

While the fireman was mopping up the water and wringing the towels out in the tub, Helen instinctively glanced around. She had always wondered what this apartment was like, and how it would be furnished.

Through the open bedroom door she caught a glimpse of the library and drawing room beyond. It showed a lavish expenditure of money, without being in particularly good taste. It was too ornate and too crowded. Helen could not help but think how much better their own apartment looked, and how much less money they had spent on it.

There was a sound of the outer door opening and of voices in the hall.

THE SANDFORDS RETURN.

"Oh, Warren! Warren!" Helen whispered, panic-stricken. "Can that be the Sanfords? Oh, how dreadful for them to catch us in here!"

Warren, who was overseeing the firemen mop up the water, only grunted.

Even when the voices were at the door of the bedroom he did not trouble to turn. Then, to Helen's horror, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford entered.

Afterward Helen told herself that in all her life she had never passed through a moment of such anguished embarrassment and awkwardness as when those people confronted her in their bedroom. Evidently they had come up on the other elevator and knew nothing of the invasion of their apartment, for Mrs. Sanford gasped and gazed at Helen in petrified amazement, while Mr. Sanford stammered an astonished,

"—I beg your pardon!"

They had not seen Warren, who had been standing inside the bathroom door, but now he stepped out with a nod:

"You left the water on here and flooded our place. The superintendent was out and I had the man break in. We've been trying to mop up some of it—but you'd better get up the rest before it soaks through."

Mrs. Sanford was the first to recover herself. She had darted into the bath room, but stepped back quickly as the water soaked through her thin evening slippers. Then she turned to Warren with an icy:

"This is an unfortunate accident, of course, but I hardly think you were justified in breaking into our apartment."

"Then that's a point, madam, on which we cannot agree. I'm of the opinion that we've done you quite a service in not letting your carelessness do more injury than it has. Before you go out, hereafter, I would advise you to turn off the water in your bathtub."

HELEN ASHAMED

Good evening."

In their own apartment Helen threw herself on the couch and hid her burning face in the pillow.

"Oh, it was dreadful!" looking up with her cheeks aflame. "When they came in there and found us like that—I thought I should go through the floor! Oh, I never was so embarrassed!"

"Embarrassed!" snorted Warren. "They're the ones to be embarrassed. The nerve of that woman!"

"And what will she say when she finds all her embroidered towels were used to wipe up that water?"

The shrug of Warren's shoulders expressed his complete indifference.

"But, dear, she may make a complaint about us breaking in the apartment."

"Let her. I guess we've got one or two kicks coming," looking up at the stained ceiling. "Pretty stiff ones, too. Don't you worry, she's going to be mighty busy keeping still."

JUSTICE SURE TO TRIUMPH, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

Do you call this honest?

In certain places of employment, notably stores, workers are severely fined for being late in the morning, yet whenever necessary these same workers are forced to stay over time without receiving one cent of extra pay—not even the return of the morning fine.

I am told that in one store employes getting only a few dollars a week are fined twenty-five cents for being one minute late, and if they are late twice in one week the rate of the penalty is doubled—that is to say fifty cents is docked each morning. Yet this same store often orders its help at certain counters to stay after regular hours, but pays them nothing for such additional service.

Mr. Employer is that fair? Because you are on top, have you any right to act as arbitrarily? You can do it with poor, unorganized shop girls, but you know you would not dare attempt it with members of a strong union.

All a worker has to sell is his or her labor. If you take that away you are stealing from him or her? If one of these workers were to adopt your principle—rather, lack of principle—and steal goods in payment of the extra services rendered, you would brand him or her a thief, would you not? Well, what are you when you fine a six dollar a week worker twenty-five cents or fifty cents for being a little late in the morning and then compel the same worker to stay twice or six times as long over time in the evening without payment.

We hear a lot about unreasonable action by labor unions, but are they guilty of anything more unreasonable, more unfair, more unjust than this?

Employers cannot expect to be allowed to continue to browbeat workers. The pendulum of justice may swing slowly, but it does swing. All over the world there is an uprising against unjust autocracy. There is a revolt against every form of tyranny. The "privileged class" is to lose its privileges. Justice between man and man, between class and mass is to be enforced. The movement has made almost unimaginable progress—we have seen it in Russia, in China, in the Balkans, in Great Britain, in the United States. Right cannot be trampled under foot forever. The eternal scheme of things decrees that justice must triumph in the end.

Taking advantage of poorly paid, unprotected help is not a small matter. It has far reaching, incendiary consequences. It breeds discontent and justly so. It arouses antagonism to employers and to capital—as it ought. In the fullness of time this discontent, this antagonism will vent itself in the form of legislation which may deal none too gently with employers and capital. Those who pay wages are rapidly losing hold of the machinery of legislation—glance at Britain, at Germany, at Belgium, at France, at Russia, at Australia, at New Zealand, at South Africa.

Let every employer digest this truth: If he will not act justly voluntarily he will be compelled to be just before the world is very much older. The graver the sin now the worse the punishment by and by.

"Sugar Is a Drug," Declares Dr. Page

Physician Says Candy and Ice Cream Are Health Menaces.

"Sugar in excess is a drug," declares Dr. Charles E. Page of No. 120 Tremont street, supporting the assertion of Dr. Robert Roessler, graduate of Berlin University, that "sugar is as food, but an enemy to civilization."

"Sugar causes no end of catarrh," says Dr. Page, "and it loads the system with catarrhal matter which must be got rid of.

"Candy is simply a load on the system. Ice cream is even worse, because it chills the stomach.

"But I would not say sugar was worse than alcohol, because that burns the mucous membrane of the stomach and causes gastritis and ulcer in addition to the poisoning."

Chamber Is to Hear Heads of Railroads

At the dinner and freight rate meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, at the Copley-Plaza Thursday evening, three railroad presidents—Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, W. C. Brown of the New York Central and Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania—are expected to speak as representatives of the roads concerned in the movement to secure New England's endorsement for a five per cent increase in freight rates. The meeting will then be thrown open to members wishing to ask questions.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks engaged this morning, foreign and home markets opening lower and sentiment being tinged with gloom. In Boston during the first part of the forenoon Calumet & Hecla declined 6, Amalgamated 1¼ and Osceola 2, while a number of other issues were fractionally down. Trading here was fairly active.

In the last half of the forenoon in New York Canadian Pacific was off 2½, Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Lehigh Valley 1⅝, Amalgamated 1¼, American Can common 1⅛ and preferred 2 and Steel half a point. The list was weak as a whole.

There was hesitancy because of uncertainty as to the action of the United States Supreme Court on the Minnesota Rate case today and the copper and cotton reports.

New York Opened Lower.

News from Europe was bearish this morning and the New York stock market weakened at the opening, declines ranging from fractions to more than a point and most of the important issues participating in the recession.

Reports of more friction between Balkan allies were rife in London, and another influence which was depressing there was liquidation in advance of the settlement. American stocks fell off and Canadian Pacific dropped because of Berlin selling. It is called to Hearst newspapers from the German capital: "The Bourse is generally on the down-grade. The prospect of another war in the Balkans added to the restrictive influences. The Bulgarian-Servian situation is regarded as highly threatening. Money still fails to return to normal conditions, and improvement before the end of June is hardly feasible. The Reichsbank is still gaining gold from London, notwithstanding that Germany received a net import balance of $6,000,000 in May."

In New York in early trading Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio were prominent in the decline, the former opening 2 points lower and the latter losing 1½. Reading opened at 156 for the loss of ½ and rallied for a complete recovery, before profit-taking caused it to fall back to its original position. Union Pacific began ¼ lower at 143⅞, but after half an hour had risen nearly to Saturday's final.

Among the declining stocks were Amalgamated, Western Union, Utah Copper, Steel common, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Kansas City Southern, Illinois Central, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio, American Can, Anaconda, American Smelting and Atchison.

The Curb was irregular.

Cotton Schedule Based on Error?

One of the reports from Washington regarding the pending tariff bill is that "the faith of members of the Senate Finance Committee has been shaken in the whole measure" because errors in figures of tremendous proportions, underestimating production of cotton goods by 112,541 square yards, of 1,000,833 in value, upon which the Ways and Means Committee of the House based the cotton schedule, have been discovered.

"Critics of the bill," it is stated, "say that in the case of duties fixed on cotton cloths the House figures are more than misleading—they are criminally wrong. They were discovered a couple time for the House to correct its bill."

According to the dispatch, House experts found that during 1910 the number of square yards of cotton cloth manufactured aggregated 5,645,257,000, valued at $374,171,000. It was upon these basis that the rates on cotton cloth were fixed.

While the bill was under consideration in the House the Ways and Means Committee submitted the revised copy of its tariff handbook and a complete report. This revised edition shows the actual production of cloth was 6,050,055,541 square yards and $421,337,837 in value.

After thus officially publishing the real figures, the House committee had never publicly let it be known that this blunder had been made. It was discovered accidentally by Senators, who are now seeking for further mistakes of the same kind.

Longest Free List Ever Known.

Not only will the Underwood bill make tariff rates the lowest on record, but the "free list" will be the longest this country has ever known. Protectionists say that the measure is a long step towards free trade. Instead of the conservative Senate eliminating the radical features of the House measure, as had been expected by many, the upper branch of Congress has added to the list of products which will be non-dutiable.

The free list will include meats, flour, livestock, wheat, probably oats and oatmeal, barley, rye, lumber, coal, boots and shoes, hoops and shooks, wood pulp, sugar to be free in three years, buckwheat and buckwheat flour, cocoa, coffee, tea, cornmeal, fish, bananas, hides, crude india rubber, indigo, cottonseed oil, castor oil, cod liver oil, potatoes, sago, vegetables, ivory, sewing machines, typewriters, print paper, steel rails, pig iron, ferro manganese used in manufacturing steel, photograph films and many chemicals used in manufacturing.

Still Fighting Underwood Bill.

But the fight against the Underwood bill, although resistance has been much weakened, is not entirely over. There are in the House a number of Democrats who oppose free raw wool and some other of its provisions. There is a plan, it is said, to tie up currency legislation, which President Wilson wants, until they can get tariff concessions. The currency bill is regarded as a Wilson and not a party issue.

It is stated that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has come to the aid of leaders in Congress are at odds over the question whether the government should issue all the paper money or whether the proposed reserve associations should be authorized to issue notes in place of the present national bank notes.

Secretary McAdoo's tentative suggestions, it is understood, would have the government issue all currency. He would retire the present bank notes and certificates, amounting to $1,070,000,000, and the national bank notes, amounting to $750,000,000.

He would make all of the paper money, "United States notes," maintaining the present issue of such notes and replacing the gold certificates and national bank notes by an increased number of United States notes. Back of these notes would be gold, based upon a certain percentage of the issue which has not yet been determined.

Chairman Glass of the House Banking and Currency Committee, on the other hand, it is said, would not disturb the present issues of gold certificates or any other United States notes, but would gradually retire the national bank notes and permit the reserve associations to issue currency, based upon the assets of the membership banks, to take the place of the national bank notes.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened weak, spot being off 5s. 6d. and futures 7s. 6d.

Morrison, Kekewich & Co. of London recently wrote F. L. Milliken & Co. of Boston:

"A great deal of quarter exists at the moment, due to the financial and political outlook. No appreciable concerns can be found in the intrinsic position of the metal, trade advices are very satisfactory, particularly in the electrical department, and with no signs of any falling off a good consumptive demand seems assured. As usual in a dull and dragging market, manufacturers hesitate to enter forward requirements, preferring to buy for actual needs, but a little stimulus from Wall street, is all that is necessary to induce much more liberal buying by the trade, besides encouraging buying on a much broader scale in the standard market.

The May output of the Old Dominion Mining Company was 2,749,000 pounds of blister copper, compared with 3,040,000 pounds in April and 2,161,000 in May, 1912.

Financial News in Brief.

Boston Commercial Company directors have declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent, on preferred and a dividend of 2 per cent. on common stock, both payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 27.

It is said in the cotton goods trade that the current week will see clean-up sales by jobbers. Lower prices for textiles have led to increased orders for Fall delivery.

Shipments of rolled steel products on contracts last week were nearly 20 per cent. in excess of new business. The demand for pig iron became more active with the lower prices asked.

Norfolk & Western's total operating revenue dgcreased $350,380 in April and the decline in net income was $585,587. For ten months, however, the operating revenue increased $3,342,963 and net income $1,541,670. The road is earning much more than its 6 per cent. common dividend requirements.

Correct Errors in Cotton Schedule

WASHINGTON, June 9.—During the present week the Underwood tariff bill, long delayed in sub-committees, will be reported to the majority of the Senate Finance Committee. The bill will remain with the committee at least one week. Thereafter it must be passed by the Democratic caucus. It is improbable that the measure will reach the floor much before July 1. The sub-committee in charge of the cotton schedule has found serious errors in the figures on which the House based its rates, and has had to readjust them.

Bank Call Issued.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The comptroller of the currency issued a call for the condition of banks at the close of business on June 4.

Conditions of the 1913 Boston American Proverb Contest

The Boston American 1913 Proverb Contest is a contest of skill and judgment, open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England.

One hundred and fifty-five cash prizes will be given absolutely free, by the Boston American, to the winners.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

The contest will consist of seventy-five puzzle pictures, to be printed one each day, consecutively, in the daily and Sunday American, but picture Sunday, June 15th.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, will not debar anyone from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two or three SETS of answers, but each SET must contain only ONE answer to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded to any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American, or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the puzzle picture furnished by the Boston American, or a picture of same, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

Do NOT send in your solutions in "list" form, i. e., do not write answers under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should contestants send in their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day, and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

Ties will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered to the Boston American Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in all together, at one time.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Proverb Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

As all answers will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rate, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse any sets of answers on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

The prizes will be awarded by a disinterested committee of judges, whose names will be announced later. The judges will in no way be connected with the Boston American.

Contestants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the "Proverb Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston Mass." Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply or they may phone Main 5080 or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the contest, and the decision of the Boston American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a contestant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

FALSE LABEL BILL IS A HELP, SAYS CASSIDY

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

There goes back to the House of Representatives and Senate today from a joint conference committee my bill protecting the public from the false labeling or stamping of packages containing food.

I wanted the word "knowingly" left out of the bill. It is behind this word that food adulterators have hidden for years.

Here's the way the bill reads today:

"Whoever falsely stamps or labels any cans, jars or other packages containing fruit or food of any kind, or permits such stamping or labeling, or, except as hereinafter provided, violates any of the provisions of sections sixteen and forty-seven inclusive, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $500; and whoever KNOWINGLY sells such goods so falsely stamped or labeled shall be punished by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100."

I wish that word "knowingly" was out of the bill. It gives a chance to a dishonest dealer to stand in collusion with a dishonest wholesaler. But this bill is a branch in the right step in advance for pure food protection.

In Right Direction.

I know the majority of the retail dealers are honorable men. Once in a great while they might have been punished for selling some falsely labelled article of food.

But the effect of the law with the "knowingly" left out would be to make them wary of all fraudulent brands of food. This would give additional protection to the consumer. It's the consumer who pays the price. "In observe protection.

I hope, however, that the Legislature will see its way to accept the bill. It protects the public in its present form from the big food swindlers. It is a step in the right direction.

Here's a case in point this law will affect. You have read the following label on Adams' pepsin tutti frutti gum:

"This is a delicious and valuable remedy of indigestion and dyspepsia. The chewing of this gum stimulates the flow of saliva which greatly absorbs the pepsin. The results can not but be beneficial.

"Manufactured by American Chicle Company, successor Adams & Sons' Company. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. The finest quality of pepsin is used in this gum."

Impose $25 Fine.

Three years ago next November the United States government seized a package of this pepsin gum from Oregon into Washington. The Bureau of Chemistry on analysis discovered that the 45 pieces "contained no active pepsin and that the label bearing the above words was false and misleading and that it was misbranded in that it contained no pepsin in the whereas the statement upon the packages and labels was calculated to and did convey the false impression and the idea that active pepsin was present therein in sufficient quantity to aid the digestion and relieve the indigestion and dyspepsia."

Two years later the case came to trial. September 17 the Tutti Frutti people entered a plea of guilty. The court imposed a fine of $25.

What good does a punishment like that do to protect the public from? How much punishment is a fine of $25 to a firm as large as this one?

Food Staples Cost Lower Than in 1912

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Producers in the United States were receiving for their staple crop 98 per cent. less on June 1 than at the same time last year. 5.1 per cent. less than in 1911. The average price for corn on June 1 was 60.6 cents, against 82.3 last year for wheat 82.7, against 102.8; for oats, 36, against 53.3; for potatoes, 39.1, against 69.7. Prices paid for meat animals ranged about 10.8 per cent. higher than the same time last year.

Woman Who Used Ax Freed in $5,000 Bail

Mrs. Genoefia Calabrese, twenty-two, accused of hitting Giuseppe Di Flore with an axe and fracturing his skull when he was alleged to have assaulted her at her home, No. 257 Eagle street, East Boston, on Thursday, was arraigned today and released on $5,000 bail. The man was still alive at the hospital. The case will be heard again June 24.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The authorities of the town of Weston have established a trap to catch motorists going in the direction of Boston just before reaching Norumbega Park. This trap is located on a wide curve and is operated electrically.

The town authorities of Milford, N. H., have published a notice warning automobilists to slow down to eight miles per hour, sound horn and keep to the right at the intersection of Nesmith and South streets and announce that they will prosecute all motorists who do not drive carefully through that town.

The guilty are under pacing horse of county fair fame was outdone during a recent ou ing by an automobile show in Las grande, Ore., by a Studebaker "25," which, for the greater part of a day, circled the course about the Studebaker exhibit, with nobody at the wheel. Just to show that it was a bona-fide demonstration of irreversible steering gear and easy control, the car was turned around and ran similarly in the opposite direction.

15 Jobs Results of New Tenement Law

Fifteen jobs, paying from $1,200 to $1,800 per year are created in the Boston Board of Health through the enactment of the new tenement house law. Under the new law the health department has 53,000 houses to inspect that hitherto been immune from the present enforcement house statutes. The new law places the three-flat house in the class with tenements and they will be subjected to the customary semi-annual inspection.

What Is a Hero? Usually a Life Saver

You Can Be a Life Saver Very Easily BY KILLING FLIES

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

You should kill flies—Reason No. 1: THE FLY IS THE MOST DANGEROUS INSECT ON EARTH. IT IS MORE DEADLY THAN THE COBRA, MORE DANGEROUS THAN THE TIGER.

It is your duty to kill flies—Reason No. 2: THE FLY CAUSES THOUSANDS OF DEATHS A YEAR FROM TYPHOID FEVER.

All good citizens must kill flies—Reason No. 3: THE FLY CAUSES THOUSANDS OF DEATHS ANNUALLY FROM INTESTINAL DISEASES.

The dead fly means good work—Reason No. 4: An expert recently examined a fly found in the street. It was carrying on its legs and in its mouth more than 100,000 bacteria.

It had been walking over filth on the water front. The expert caught it on the edge of a glass of milk.

Please kill flies—Reason No. 5: EVERY AUTUMN THERE IS A RISE IN THE DEATH RATE FROM TYPHOID. THIS RISE IS TRACED BY THE SCIENTISTS DIRECTLY TO THE FLY.

We beg of you to kill flies—Reason No. 6: THE FLY KILLS TENS OF THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN EVERY YEAR.

The fly causes more blindness in children than all other causes combined.

The fly spreads every known disease to children and to adults, for it frequents every disease breeding spot and hunts purposely for filth.

Early in the season KILL FLIES.

In the middle of the Summer KILL FLIES.

And in the Autumn and in the Winter, if you can find them, still KILL FLIES.

Treat the fly as our ancestors in the old days treated the red Indians and the wolves.

First, shut them out of your house, make sure that they won't get in; then kill them off as rapidly as possible and pray for the day when you will no longer have to protect your house against them.

Screen your windows.

Screen your doors.

New fly screens made of wire netting that will not rust are more important than a new coat of paint or a new automobile, for fly screens mean protection for children.

Protect your house from the flies as absolutely as possible. Protect your food supplies and protect your babies' faces separately.

As the child lies asleep, keep mosquito netting over it.

Keep your sugar bowl, butter dish and food supplies covered.

Don't forget that if you see flies, their breeding place is nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table, or in the cuspidor.

If there is no dirt or filth there will be no flies.

If there is a nuisance in the neighborhood write at once to the Health Department.

Do not allow decaying material of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises. All refuse should be removed at once or covered with lime or kerosene.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

See that your sewerage system is in good order. Pour kerosene into the drains.

Cover food after a meal. Burn or bury all table refuse. Screen all food offered for sale. Buy no food that has been exposed to flies.

It is only by earnest, intelligent co-operation that the fly can finally be abolished.

The citizens should combine, the national, State, city and village governments should combine with them to wipe out the unseen enemies of man, the flies that carry all the diseases, or very nearly all, and the mosquito that alone infects men with malaria and yellow fever.

THE THING CAN BE DONE, for it has been done by governments in Cuba, in Panama and in New Orleans.

The trouble is that the country will not take the matter seriously.

Darwin told us that one single pair of flies in forty-eight hours—the quick-breeding African fly—will lay enough eggs and breed enough maggots to devour a lion, leaving nothing but the white bones.

A few flies surviving through the Winter start the plague afresh the following year.

And one careless citizen leaving a breeding ground for mosquitoes supplies enough to infest the whole country.

Fortunately, for two or three years the people have been alive to the fact that their enemies are the tiny fly and mosquito and the invisible disease germs—enemies more deadly and dangerous than ever were the great monsters of prehistoric times or the wolves and lions of our day.

Discussion has begun, newspapers have taken it up and offered prizes. A few public officials have at least TRIED to do something. But only a beginning has been made.

The country must realize the danger and the duty. Children must be taught that the killing of flies is a good and necessary act, painful as it is to take life.

Do what you can to arouse public feeling for the sake of public safety.

And in the meanwhile DO WHAT YOU CAN INDIVIDUALLY.

Kill the flies.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SAIL FROM BOSTON

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The AMERICAN has the right idea, the right spirit.

Sail from Boston. That should be the slogan for business for New England. Advance the best interests of the port by making successful the endeavor of those who in their generosity of purpose, are trying to keep alive the trade relation ship of this port.

Sail from Boston. People need not go from New York now. Boston has the facilities and can improve.

MAX HENRY NEWMAN.

WOULD MAKE NAVY SECOND ONLY TO THAT OF ENGLAND

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Too much praise can't be given the AMERICAN in the stand it has taken regarding the navy. The "Tories" at Washington should be awakened to the fact that as a naval power the United States is fast falling down the line in tonnage and is at present in fourth place. All red-blooded Americans, headed by Mr. W. R. Hearst, should get together and make Congress appropriate money enough to build up the navy so that it will be put back in second place, second to none but England, where it was at once time and where it belongs. After the navy is put back in second place, a yearly building program of two battleships, one cruiser, six destroyers, four submarines, and two auxiliaries, besides one ship for each ship that is placed in ordinary should be carried out.

A LITTLE GIRL'S GOOD WAY TO STOP DROWNINGS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Let us band together and save some lives this Summer—I mean my people, girls and boys and men and women, who can swim. We can do it if each of us will agree to teach at least one person to swim. It will take only a wee bit of time each day for a week or so, for it is as easy to learn to swim as it is to walk. I learned when I was only four years old.

Every year 5,000 persons drown at the seashore or on lakes and rivers. Little boys and girls and grown-ups who can't swim.

I am only a little girl, but I am going to teach at least two children to swim this Summer.

MARY E. MILLER.

PUT "OLD GLORY" ON THE SEAS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Senator Simmons definitely announces, after a conference with President Wilson, that the proposed five per cent. differential on imports in American vessels be dropped from the tariff bill in the Senate on account of protests from foreign nations. Does the United States Senate intend that the United States shall go forever without a merchant marine because foreign nations protest or complain? Shame on such Americanism.

Anything and everything to restore "Old Glory" to its former renowned position on the seven seas.

The Discontented Woman—Dissatisfaction Worse Than Conceit. She Makes Happiness Impossible by Her Mental Attitude

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal Examiner

MISTAKES.

GOD sent us here to make mistakes,
To strive, to fail, to re-begin,
To taste the tempting fruit of sin,
And find what bitter food it makes.

To miss the path, to go astray,
To wander blindly in the night;
But, searching, praying for the light,
Until at last we find the way.

And looking back along the past,
We know we needed all the strain
Of fear and doubt and strife and pain
To make us value peace at last.

Who fails, finds later triumph sweet;
Who stumbles once, walks then with care,
And knows the place to cry "Beware"
To other unaccustomed feet.

Through strife the slumbering soul awakes,
We learn on error's troubled route
The truths we could not prize without
The sorrow of our sad mistakes.

THE conceited girl or woman is tiresome as a companion, but the morbidly discontented woman is far worse. Perhaps you have met her, with her eternal complaint of the injustice of Fate toward her.

She feels that she is born for better things than have befallen her; her family does not understand her; her friends misjudge her; the public slights her.

If she is married she finds herself superior to her husband and to her associates. She is eternally longing for what she has not, and when she gets it is dissatisfied.

The sorrowful side of life alone appeals to her.

This she believes is due to her "artistic nature." The injustice of Fortune and the unkindness of society are topics dear to her hear. She finds her only rapture in misery.

Loses Years of Heaven on Earth by Her Mental Attitude

If she is religiously inclined, she looks toward heaven with more grim satisfaction in the thought that it will strip fame, favors and fortune from the unworthy than because it will give her the benefits she feels she deserves.

She does not dream that she is losing years of heaven here upon earth by her own mental attitude.

We build our heavens thought by thought.

If you are dwelling upon the dark phases of your destiny and upon the ungracious acts of Fate, you are shaping more of the same experience for yourself here and in realms beyond.

You are making happiness for yourself impossible upon any plane.

In your own self lies Destiny.

I have known a woman to keep her entire family despondent for years by her continual assertions that she was out of her sphere, misunderstood and unappreciated. The minds of sensitive children accepted these statements and grieved over the "Poor Mother's" sad life until their own youth was embittered. The morbid mother seized upon the sympathies of her children like a leech and sapped their young lives of joy.

Understand Yourself and You Will Cease to Be Misunderstood

The husband grew discouraged and indifferent under the continual strain, and what might have been a happy home was a desolate one, and its memory is a nightmare to the children today.

Understand yourself and your Divine possibilities and you will cease to think you are misunderstood.

It is not possible to misunderstand a beautiful, sunny day. All nature rejoices in its loveliness.

Give love, cheerfulness, kindness and good will to all humanity and you need not long worry about being misunderstood.

Give the best you have to each object, purpose and individual and you will eventually receive the best from humanity.

CHEER UP!

By M. E. MURRAY

LIFE is too short to grumble and rile,
Meet trouble bravely, learn how to smile.
Set your jaw firmly, don't be a shirk,
Do your best always, keep hard at work.

What is the use of looking for clouds?
Keep in the sunshine, out in the crowds.
Look to the right of you, left of you, too,
Others have troubles far worse than you.

Learn to look upward, see the blue sky;
Yonder the sun shines, God is on high.
Pleasure is sweeter, enhanced after pain,
Those who keep cheerful, grit will attain.

A STUDY IN PARENTS

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN father had the grip, our flat
Was like a church, it was so solemn.
"'Twas father this and father that";
In whispers column after column;
We had to go tiptoeing out
"You must not sing," said mother sadly.
"Step softly when you move about
Or you'll annoy poor father badly."

And when we went to bed, Marie
Told us to pray good health for mother.
Because if she got ill, you see,
We'd have hard work to find another.
I don't quite understand, do you?
But just the same we liked it rather
When he got well—life is so blue
When anything goes wrong with father.

When mother had the grip, our flat
Was like a farmhouse in vacation;
No one said: "Don't do this or that."
No one put bars on conversation.
We didn't have to tiptoe out,
We skipped and hopped just as it pleased us;
We batted tennis balls about,
And shouted when the fancy seized us.

And then at bed-time, father came,
And played he was a lion roaring,
A most exciting kind of game,
That made the chairs dance on the flooring.
And yet—it's just my point of view,
His, too, I guess—I mean my brother—
That living is a lot more blue
When anything goes wrong with mother.
